Industry Reports Recovery, Urges Congress Recess

Adjournment Proposed to Bring an End to 'Uncertainties.'

Job Insurance Hit By Manufacturers

Work for Four Million Seen in Expansion by U. S. Factories.

Following an extensive study of the economic situation, the National Association of Manufacturers stated yesterday that "this country is closer to breaking the back of the depression than at any time since the forces of recovery began working through the world in 1932."

The statement said that billions of dollars of stored-up demand which, if unloosed, would dwarf the Federal relief appropriation, await only the clearing away of political uncertainties.

The statement came as another great business organization, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, was gathering for the opening day of its annual convention. At the same time, labor union leaders from all parts of the country were gathering in Washington. Both groups have a similar purpose, that of impressing on Congress and the Administration their views of pending legislation and of measures designed to help end the depression.

"Surveys indicate," the manufacturers' statement said, "that close to $20,000,000,000 in expenditures, which would give employment to 4,000,000 men for two years, is pent-up in the field of factory expansion, renovation and rehabilitation alone. The release of this flow of private capital by removing political uncertainties would dwarf the billions appropriated by Congress for relief and make unnecessary the expenditure of much of the taxpayer's money."

Hits "Uncertainties."

Other billions, the manufacturers' statement said, largely within the durable goods field, are in the hands of small consumers who are awaiting elimination of factors which caution purchase only of those articles of absolute immediate need.

"Virtually every business index studied points upward at this time," the statement said. "There is an undoubted spirit of optimism in the land. Recovery is within our grasp if we as a Nation co-operate to prevent the disappointing curve downward which has followed each business rise of recent years. Next year a national election impends, with its traditional disturbing effects upon business, and if this year's opportunity to activate business and curtail unemployment is lost, experience dictates that conditions will be less favorable in 1936."

The Manufacturers Association urged that industry and business contribute to the fullest extent toward re-employment both in their own establishments, and in the purchase of those postponed items which will provide jobs in other plants. It urged that Congress and the Government co-operate by eliminating uncertainties as to future legislation which forbids long-term commitments by industry.

Wants Quick Adjournment.

"This means," the statement continued, "the laying aside temporarily of any legislation which is not aimed directly and positively at ending the depression and restoring the millions of idle persons to work within private industry, and the adjournment of Congress as soon as possible. Consideration of legislation designed to meet further situations but which would be a disturbing element during the coming year by compelling a halt while industry makes the necessary adjustments, should be shelved until the next Congress convenes seven months hence."

Legislation the association believes should be postponed includes the unemployment insurance section of the social security bill, the banking bill, the utility holding company bill and changes in railroad laws.

"In addition," the statement continued, "there is the continuing threat of monetary inflation, the 30-hour week bill, the Wagner labor disputes bill, extension of the authority of the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Guffey coal bill, which if enacted would compel a waiting period for recovery while business adjusted itself to their provisions.

"A survey by the Metal and Allied Products Institute, based upon actual replies from manufacturing plants, shows $18,000,000,000 of machinery purchases withheld over the past five years, which would give employment to 4,000,000 men for two years. This does not take into consideration the current machinery needs of the next two years.

"The committee for economic recovery estimates a delayed demand for durable goods of $49,275,000,000, which would keep this country near the industrial peak for ten years. Col. Leonard Ayres, noted Cleveland economist, estimates $80,000,000,000 of waiting demand.

"Industry recognizes fully its responsibility to the unemployed and no group is more sincere in its ef-

Social Leader Dies

Underwood & Underwood.
RAYMOND T. BAKER.

Ray T. Baker Dies; Ex-Chief Of U. S. Mint

Leader in D. C. Society Once a Prospector in Gold Fields.

Raymond T. Baker, former director of the United States Mint, died yesterday at his home, 2300 Foxhall road northwest. He had been seriously ill for six weeks, suffering from coronary thrombosis. He was 56.

Mrs. Baker, the former Delphine Dodge Cromwell, is in London, whither she went to study music. Her daughter, 3-year-old Anna May Baker, is with her.

A tall, well-built man with white hair and black eyebrows, Mr. Baker was a prominent figure in Washington society. Not long ago, he was adjudged one of the best-dressed men in the city.

Once Gold Prospector.

In his youth, however, Ray Baker thought little of things sartorial. Along with Key Pittman, now a United States Senator, he was a grimy prospector in the gold fields of Nevada. Later he was to become a prison warden, a diplomat in Russia, director of the mint, and the husband of two of the wealthiest women in America.

He was born in Eureka, Nev., November 22, 1878, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Washington Baker. When he was 13, the family moved to California, where the father became chief counsel for the Southern Pacific Railroad.

Following his graduation from the University of California, he went back to Nevada to try his luck in Goldfield and Tonopah, where important strikes had been made. While he was there, he encountered Key Pittman and another man who

Vatican Hits Foes; Reich Held Target

Cardinal Serves Notice of Fight; Duce Sees 'Hard Period' Due.

Junking of London Naval Pact by Britain Urged Because of U-Boats.

The Situation Abroad.

In a broadcast at the Vatican to worshippers at Lourdes, the Pope fervently prayed for world peace. Cardinal Pacelli, at Lourdes, served an indirect warning on Adolph Hitler that the Church would never come to terms with him while Nazis persist in a racial philosophy "contrary to the Christian faith."

The London Daily Herald said Adolf Hitler has built a strong naval and airplane base in the North Sea and that the Reich now has a number of submarines under construction. U-boat reports were believed in London to have broken up a proposed Anglo-German naval conference week after next.

The Rumanian cabinet approved a plan which would make that nation the strongest military power in southwestern Europe. More than $200,000,000 will be spent in a 10-year defense program

As a preliminary to the June Danubian conference in Rome, Italy, Austria and Hungary will meet May 4 at Venice to decide what course of action to follow.

Berlin dispatches said Germany's lack of raw materials and dependence upon foreign nations for them was a serious drawback to the re-armament program. As a result experts foresaw abandonment or modification of some phases of the program.

By the Associated Press.

Lourdes, France, April 28.—Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, secretary of state for the Vatican, served indirect notice upon Reichsfuehrer Hitler today that the church never will come to terms with him while the Nazis persist in a racial philosophy " contrary to the Christian faith."

Enemies of the cross, "whatever their name," were denounced by the Pope's representative at the Eucharistic Triduum here as "the real fomenters of evils from which humanity suffers."

It was the cardinal's closing speech after three nights and three days of continuous masses dedicated to peace at this famous grotto. Many German pilgrims were among the immense throng at the colorful final ceremony.

Communism Target.

An attack on both Hitlerism and Communism was apparent in Cardinal Pacelli's denunciation of Christianity's "enemies" whom he accused of using the depression to spread "aversion for the cross."

"The poverty and distress which shakes the social order is great, deep and anguishing," he said, adding "worry over our daily bread in the depressing uncertainty of tomorrow uses up the physical and moral forces of many men without leaving them a little calm and respite to think of their souls.

"With the mind always upon material tasks, they scarcely think at all any longer, raising their eyes to the cross.

"What is tragic is that this aversion for the cross is raised to its utmost by those who are deny-

Army Plans Aerial Fort Near Canada

Testimony on Defense Bill Reveals Camouflage About Project.

High Officers Reported Fearful Lest Enemy Base Over Line.

By the Associated Press.

A "camouflaged" provision for a powerful air base near the Canadian border was disclosed yesterday to have been written into the Wilcox air base bill as redrafted by the War Department.

Brig. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne, assistant chief of staff in charge of war plans, put the language into the bill already approved by the House Military Committee, which designates six other strategic areas for consideration in creating defensive aviation centers.

"I should be very glad to put in the bill the Great Lakes area," Kilbourne told a secret meeting of the committee, "but I could not put it in the bill because of the Canadian situation.

"You will notice No. 7 in my bill is camouflaged. It is called 'intermediate' stations for transcontinental flights, but it means the same thing."

Base Near Great Lakes.

As framed by Representative Wilcox (Democrat), Florida, the bill proposed a base in the Great Lakes region, but the clause was eliminated after Kilbourne said:

"We would like to put one close to the Great Lakes, but we must avoid going too far in establishing new military stations close to the northern border and limit ourselves to those essential in peace-time training operations. * * *

"We do not want to accentuate anything that would look as though we contemplated passing away from the century-old principle that our Canadian border needs no defense. I think it would be very unfortunate if we did."

Testimony of high War Department officials at the secret session, just made available in a printed committee report, showed their fear an enemy might establish air bases in Canada for operations against the vital population and industrial centers in the Northeast quarter of the United States.

Canada Seen Friend.

Brig. Gen. F. M. Andrews, head of the new general headquarters Air Force, told the committee it was not believed Canada would join a coalition hostile to the United States unless forced to.

It was Andrews, also, who advised the committee that this country in an emergency must be ready to seize the British and French islands near the American coast and Panama Canal "to prevent their development by the enemy as bases of operation against us." He did not define an "emergency."

Midwest G. O. P. Sets Rally at Springfield

Excelsior Springs, Mo., April 28 (AP).—Proposing a crusade to "re-establish representative government," a preliminary conference of Midwestern Republicans announced today a rallying convention would be held early in June at Springfield, Ill., national shrine of the party.

Harrison E. Spangler, national committeeman for Iowa and chairman of the conference here, said the actual date will be announced within a few days. The time is dependent upon hotel capacity and negotiations to have the Illinois Legislature recess while the convention is in session.

Youth Flies 3 Minutes With Self-Made Wings

Lambert Airfield, St. Louis, April 28 (U.P.).—Clem Sohn, 23, Lansing, Mich., "Birdman," thrilled 10,000 spectators here today with a three-minute flight in which he utilized self-made "wings" to fly through 7,500 feet of space before opening his parachute to land.

His flight was from 9,000 feet at which height he jumped from a plane and spread his wings. He dropped to 1,500 feet before opening his parachute. He leaped from the plane at 2:42 and landed at 2:45.

The jump was his eighth since he invented the wings.

Roosevelt Goes on Air to Enlist Nation's Aid in Recovery Plan; Insists on Legislative Program

President Roosevelt last night delivered an address to the country from his study in the White House.

Pending Bills on Social Security, NRA's Life, Holding Companies and Bank Control Vital to Future, He Declares.

Country as Whole Is More Cheerful, Millions Are Told in 'Fireside Chat'

President Ignores Critics and Rival Scheme Proponents in Quiet Plea for 'Faith;' Explains Works Project Set-up.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt last night asked for support by the American people of his legislative program, declaring that all the Administration "must" legislation pending in Congress is essential to a rounded plan for recovery.

Striking an optimistic note, the President told the millions who listened to his "fireside" radio talk that "Americans as a whole are feeling a lot better—a lot more cheerful than for many, many years."

On the same note of optimism, he said: "Never since my inauguration in March, 1933, have I felt so unmistakably the atmosphere of recovery."

Lists Vital Bills.

Talking primarily for the purpose of explaining in detail his vast work-relief program, the President also outlined briefly the provisions of each of the important Administration bills.

The measures for which he asked support are:

Social security legislation.

Extension of the NRA.

Legislation for elimination of unnecessary holding companies.

Legislation designed to improve the status of transportation agencies.

Banking legislation.

President Roosevelt took little cognizance of critics of his plan or of groups proposing rival recovery schemes. His talk rather was a quiet exposition of his plans and a plea for retention of faith in the Government and in the future.

"The Administration and the Congress," he told his listeners, "are not proceeding in any haphazard fashion in this task of government. Each of our steps has a definite relationship to every other step."

Holds View Changed.

He likened the process to building a ship, pointing out that the recovery structure has so many parts that, while in the process of building, it may be difficult for some to visualize the finished whole.

"The objective of the Nation has greatly changed in three years," he said. "Before that time individual self-interest and group selfishness were paramount in public thinking. The general good was at a discount.

"Three years of hard thinking have changed the picture."

The American people, the President continued, "know that the process of the constructive rebuilding of America can not be done in a day or a year, but that it is being done in spite of the few who seek to confuse them and to profit by their confusion."

Speaking, he said, "to and of the American people as a whole," the President launched into a detailed description of the works program, tying in with it social security legislation, which he said was a necessary complement to the works program.

Carrying out the works program, he said, was his most immediate concern.

"It is true," he said, "that while business and industry are definitely better, our relief rolls are still too large. However, for the first time in five years the relief rolls have declined instead of increasing during the winter months. They are still declining. The simple fact is that many million more people have private work today than two years ago today or one year ago today, and every day that passes offers more chances to work for those who want to work."

Two kinds of remedial measures are necessary, the President told his listeners, in the unemployment situation. The first, he said, is to make provisions to relieve, minimize and to prevent future unemployment. The second is to relieve those who are unemployed in the present emergency. Social scurity legislation, he said, is an attempt to answer the first problem and the work-relief program to answer the second.

"While our present and projected expenditures for work relief are wholly within the reasonable limits of our national credit resources, it is obvious that we can not continue to create governmental deficits for that purpose year after year," he said.

Old-age pension legislation, the President continued, will permit older workers to retire and thus give more opportunities to the young. Unemployment insurance, he said, will by sustaining purchasing power cushion the shock of economic distress.

The problem of putting 3,500,000 persons to work is "quite as much for private industry as for the Government."

Step by step, then, he told his radio listeners the same details of the works set-up he described to newspapermen at his press conference Friday. He told of each of the separate parts of the set-up and how he expected it to function.

Expect to "See Dirt Fly."

"I well realize," the President said, after outlining the details of the works set-up, "that the country is expecting before the year is out to see the 'dirt fly,' as they say, in carrying on this work and I assure my fellow citizens that no energy will be spared in using these funds effectively to make a major attack upon the problem of unemployment.

"This is a great national crusade," he said, "to destroy enforced idleness which is the enemy of the human spirit generated by the depression. Our attack upon these enemies must be without stint and without discrimination. No sectional, no political, distinctions can be permitted."

The President said, however, he recognized that in a project extended over more than 3,000 counties that there may be occasional instances of inefficiency, bad management or misuse of funds.

"When cases of this kind occur," he said, "there will be those, of course, who will try to tell you that the exceptional failure is char-

Mexico Aids See Morgenthau To Talk Over Silver Problem

Surrender of Coins, Bank Close Followed by Hurried Conferences; U. S. Stands Pat on Its Price of Metal.

By the Associated Press.

Monetary troubles in Mexico, born of world silver prices soaring after United States Treasury offers, yesterday were taken directly to Secretary Morgenthau by representatives of the southern republic.

For an hour, President Roosevelt's first financial adviser conferred with Ambassador Castillo Najara and Roberto Lopez, assistant secretary of the Mexican treasury who was sped to Washington by his government when climbing silver prices forced orders for the surrender of silver coins and closed banks over the week-end.

With Morgenthau were Herman Oliphant, the Treasury's general council, and Herbert Feis, economic advisor to the State Department.

Officials of neither nation would discuss the meeting beyond indicating further conferences. But before the session, Lopez said "it would seem proper that both countries should find a way to co-operate in this matter."

Morgenthau's office reiterated last night there would be no change in the 77.57 cents an ounce price for newly-mined domestic metal before today.

During the day Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, co-author of the silver purchase act, predicted a continuation of the Administration's present silver policy eventually would force international currency stabilization.

Despite the silence in official quarters, the belief was general that the Mexican government would urge the United States to ease its buying program just as China has asked in the past.

Mexico City, April 28.—The Bank of Mexico announced oday it will buy and sell an unlimited quantity of dollars at 3.60 pesos beginning tomorrow, thus restoring the exchange rate which until the peso shot up Thursday has been in effect for a year and a half.

A number of banks and individuals who bought United States dollars for as low as 3.50 pesos during the two days when the Mexican currency was skyrocketing will be able to sell them at the 3.60 price, taking large profits on the transactions.

New Bronze 20-cent pieces were put into circulation today. Silver coins were rapidly disappearing, making it difficult for people to make change and handicapping stores and business.

Stroke Is Fatal To Postmaster Of Santa Claus

Real Kris Kringle of Poor Leaves Kindly Memories as His Monument.

Santa Claus, Ind., April 28.—James F. (Jim) Martin, 60, who, as postmaster in this town of 75 inhabitants, was known to children in all parts of the world as Santa Claus himself, died today.

Jim Martin wore no false whiskers or red suit, but in his homely working garb the jovial, kindly man did his best to see that thousands of youngsters who wrote to him each year received the gifts they asked.

With the aid of charitable organizations and private citizens not many went unremembered. In this respect Jim Martin was truly Santa Claus.

He suffered a paralytic stroke two weeks ago, but rallied under a deluge of mail from his little friends throughout the country. A relapse set in last night and he died in a coma shortly after noon today.

The village of Santa Claus consists of a general store which was run by Martin and which contained his postoffice, a church, a grade school, a restaurant and recreation room combined, and 15 homes.

The famed postoffice was in the rear of the general store and Martin, who was brought up in these Spencer County hills, operated it for 28 years. Each Christmas it handled 500,000 pieces of mail.

Most of the letters were from children asking gifts. Many were pathetic, sent from homes where Christmas, like as not, would go unobserved in poverty. The Postoffice Department forwarded all letters to Santa Claus to Martin, and he did his best to answer them.

Those which did not contain stamps for reply were turned over to organized and private charities which tried to supply the most needy youngsters with the gifts they requested.

Job Especially Difficult.

"They'd tear your heart out, some of those letters," Martin used to say.

Other mail was from adults who wanted their packages of Christmas gifts and their Christmas cards postmarked "Santa Claus." Business houses took up the idea and the postmaster had his work cut out for him once a year.

His job was especially hard because Santa Claus is without a railroad. The bulging mail sacks were hauled to and from Lincoln City, 12 miles away. An attempt was made to discontinue the Santa Claus postoffice, for reasons of economy, in 1932, but protests cried down the idea and instead the Postoffice Department installed a huge, modern cancellation machine

Text of the President's Broadcast

Following is the text of President Roosevelt's radio talk:

Since my annual message to the Congress on January 4 last, I have not addressed the general public over the air. In the many weeks since that time the Congress has devoted itself to the arduous task of formulating legislation necessary to the country's welfare. It has made and is making distinct progress.

Before I come to any of the specific measures, however, I want to leave in your minds one clear fact. The Administration and the Congress are not proceeding in any haphazard fashion in this task of government. Each of our steps has a definite relationship to every other step. The job of creating a program for the Nation's welfare is, in some respects, like the building of a ship. At different points on the coast where I often visit they build great sea-going ships. When one of these ships is under construction and the steel frames have been set in the keel, it is difficult for a person who does not know ships to tell how it will finally look when it is sailing the high seas.

It may seem confused to some, but out of the multitude of detailed parts that go into the making of the structure the creation of a useful instrument for man ultimately comes. It is that way with the making of a national policy. The objective of the Nation has greatly changed in three years. Before that time individual self-interest and group selfishness were paramount in public thinking. The general good was at a discount.

Three years of hard thinking have changed the picture. More and more people, because of clearer thinking and a better understanding, are considering the whole rather than a mere part relating to one section or one crop or one industry, or an individual private occupation. That is a tremendous gain for the principles of democracy. The overwhelming majority of people in this country know how to sift the wheat from the chaff in what they hear and what they read. They know that the process of the constructive rebuilding of America cannot be done in a day or a year, but that is being done in spite of the few who seek to confuse them and to profit by their confusion. Americans as a whole are feeling a lot better—a lot more cheerful than for many, many years.

The most difficult place in the world to get a clear and open perspective of the country as a whole is Washington. I am reminded sometimes of what President Wilson once said: "So many people come to Washington who know things that are not so and so few people who know

100,000 Easter Worshipers Defy Soviet's Atheistic Regime

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 28.—Seven hundred persons holding lighted candles stood reverently in a courtyard in the midst of atheist Moscow today and solemly chanted "Christ Is Risen."

In the 50 churches still open in the city perhaps 100,000 others gathered at intervals from dawn to dusk in the traditionally impressive Eastern ceremonies of the Russian Orthodox Church.

Easter services were conducted without hindrance from authorities although Soviet Russia is avowedly atheistic. Even anti-religious torchlight parades of other Easters were abandoned.

Most of the worshipers were elderly and poorly dressed and from streets nearby the churches they could hear the laughter and shouts of playing youths symbolic of the atheistic spirit of the younger generation.

The courtyard strong overflowed fro mthe one small church, where the holiest Ikon in all Russia—presented to the Tsar by the monks of Mount Athos in 1641—is preserved.

Other churches were also densely packed and at midnight there was scarcely room for another person in any house of worship.

At one big church, Metropolitan Sergei—acting patriarch of the Greek Orthodox Church in Russia—conducted services. He made a striking figure with his long hair and beard and the flames of hundreds of candles flashing from his gold brocaded robes and jeweled miter.

Another scene reminiscent of the place at the outskirts of the city, days of the imperial Romanoffs took where remaining members of the dwindling "old believers" sect gathered at the one church still owned by their once powerful order.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—Advent of the orthodox Easter was celebrated early today by New York's Greeks, Russians, Rumanians and Syrians with ancient ritual and the traditional candlelight procession.

Beginning before midnight and lasting into the early morning hours more than 5,000 worshipers thronged the Greek Cathedral of Holy Trinity on East Seventy-fourth street to celebrate the Resurrection.

The cathedral was darkened as the moment of the Resurrection approached and in the reverent silence Archbishop Athenagoras, primate of the Hellenic Eastern Orthodox Church of North and South America, appeared in gold-encrusted robes, a great jeweled mitre on his head and bearing two paschal candles.

Then the worshipers swarmed to him to light their own tapers and soon the cathedral was brilliant with thousands of tiny flames. From the cathedral the throng formed a procession through the streets, returning to the church for the mass of the Resurrection.

Rise in Food Costs Soon to End, Says AAA Consumers Guide

By the Associated Press.

Food prices are about to stop their nervous upward travel and settle down to a constant level for a few months, the Consumers Guide of the AAA says.

In recent months both housewives and Administration leaders have watched the rise of food costs with trepidation. But even so, says the Consumers Guide, the average cost of feeding a family on March 12, 1935, still was 19 per cent below the cost in 1930.

Now that the recent rise has lost some of its going power, AAA experts have combed the food lists of the last three months to determine what happened to the most common food items.

Some prices of foods have gone down slightly. Those which dropped less than 5 per cent were macaroni, oranges, canned red and pink salmon, tomato juice, sugar, coffee, wheat flour and apples.

Some prices of foods went down even more, on lettuce, lemons, fresh eggs and green beans.

A long list of foods which increased in price less than 10 per cent includes sliced ham, vegetable lard substitute, evaporated milk, butter, cornmeal, rolled oats, canned corn, bananas, corn flakes, cream, black-eyed peas, corn syrup, table salt, canned pears, canned peaches, dried peaches, pound cake, fresh milk, canned peas, canned asparagus, pork and beans, rice, dried lima beans, raisins, canned green beans, molasses and tea.

Meats and a few winter vegetables took more spectacular jumps.

Supreme Court NRA Decisions Due This Week

Richberg Is Scheduled to Defend Wage and Hour Provisions.

By the Associated Press.

Opening arguments involving the constitutionality of two NRA fundamentals and expected decisions on laws touching millions of farmers and workers today will summon New Deal officials to another week of watchful waiting at doors of the austere Supreme Court chamber.

On Thursday, Donald R. Richberg, NRA chairman, and Justice Department lawyers were scheduled to tell the court why code wage and hour provisions of the recovery law should be ruled valid.

Today, after a two weeks' recess, the court may bring rulings on the validity of the railroad retirement pension act and the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium law. Both cases were argued several weeks ago.

Held Unconstitutional.

The railroad law, vigorously contested by the Nation's major carriers and affecting a million employes, was held unconstitutional by the District of Columbia Supreme Court, because of provisions holding all railroad employes were engaged in interstate commerce, and because service of employes prior to the law was considered in computing retirement pensions.

The lower court held those two provisions could not be discarded without destroying the purpose of the legislation. A third provision, held invalid but separable from the act, provided that former employes who had left railroad service within a year of the act's passage could qualify for its benefits.

Millions of dollars in farm mortgages were subject to the Frazier-Lemke ruling, which came before the tribunal on an appeal from a decision of a Louisville court upholding its validity.

The provisions challenged provide that bankrupt farmers may retain possession of their mortgaged farms for five years by payment of a reasonable rental. During that period, they can wipe out their mortgaged indebtedness by paying the appraised value of the farm.

Two Cases Involved.

The NRA arguments will involve two cases arising from the prosecution of the A. L. A. Schechter Poultry Corporation of Brooklyn. The wage and hour policies of NRA were held invalid by the second circuit court of appeals, and both the Government and the poultry company agreed to rush the questions before the high tribunal.

The court also has 34 other cases which it has heard and in which opinions may be handed down today.

Among these were the attempt of the United States to prevent Arizona from interfering with the construction of Parker Dam on the Colorado River; the dispute between Wisconsin and Michigan over their boundary across Green Bay; whether Communist propaganda is protected by Constitutional guarantees, against State laws aimed to punish attempts to incite insurrection, and whether State regulatory commissions may use commodity prices in fixing the value of public utilities for rate-making purposes.

Jews Nearing Close Of Protocol Debate

Final Phase of Racial Case Beginning Today.

By the Associated Press.

Berne, Switzerland, April 28.—Jewry's effort to prove it is not seeking to dominate the world enters its final phase tomorrow when a hearing reopens in the famous "protocol of the elders of Zion" case.

The suit was brought by Swiss Jewish organizations against leaders of Swiss Nazi organizations, which have been dissolved. The latter used the "protocol" in an attempt to prove allegations that Israel planned to rule the world.

The case, postponed last October 31, reopens as Swiss anti-Nazi feeling is at a height because of the alleged kidnaping on Swiss soil by German Nazis of Berthold Jacob, fugitive journalist from the Third Reich.

Hearings are expected to last a week.

France, Russia Fit Pact to Locarno

Both Want Treaty Within League, Moscow Says.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 28.—France and Russia have agreed that mutual military assistance rendered under the Franco-Soviet pact should be given on the basis of a decision of the council of the League of Nations, an official communique announced today.

The government stated further that the Franco-Soviet pact would fit in with the Locarno agreements.

Both France and Russia have been in agreement on these points since the beginning of negotiations, the communique said, and thus the question of automatic military assistance is not causing differences between the two countries.

"There is no reason to believe," it said, "that any insurmountable obstacles exist in the way of reaching a complete agreement."

'Balloon Train' Makes Test Hop at Moscow

Moscow, April 28 (AP).—A balloon train, claimed to be the first in the world, made a three-hour successful flight from Moscow to Podolsk, about 30 miles away, today.

Two members of the crew jumped in parachutes from two balloons, tied together, one above the other. The ballons were severed and landed separately.

Between You and Me

Hopkins the Real Mainspring Behind Relief Billions; Cotton Troubles an Old Story.

By Raymond Clapper

PEOPLE who want something out of the works relief barrel probably will crowd around the office or NEC Director Frank C. Walker, but the real mainspring will be located several blocks away in the lean, wiry person of Harry Hopkins. He is the man to watch if you want to know how the works program is doing.

A score of names have been thrown into the official set-up. Divisions and committees have been piled up, in a series of interlocking memberships that look like the chart of Electric Bond & Share holdings. But Harry Hopkins, Iowa boy, swearing, poker-playing social worker, wisecracking, bead-eyed, Federal relief administrator, who can both take it and give it, and who has been doing both in outstanding style for nearly two years here, will be the stage manager of the most collosal attempt organized society ever made to rescue the victims of its own mistakes.

There will be nearly $5,000,000,000 and 20,000,000 people to work with. This isn't to say in any sense that Hopkins will be the whole show or even the leading man in the cast. But he will be the man whose business it is to see that the performance clicks, that the props are on, that the cast knows its lines, and that the tempo keeps up to the high-speed pace ordered by the producer in the White House.

* * * *

It will be up to Mr. Hopkins to:

1. See that work goes to persons on relief rolls.
2. Determine what wages shall be paid to constitute a security wage in various areas.
3. Coordinate efforts of United States Employment Service and Government agencies in returning relief workers to private employment.
4. Purchase materials for projects.
5. Check progress of projects and see that they are keeping up with time schedules.
6. Make recommendations for additional work in areas where insufficient projects have been developed.
7. Continue serving relief to persons not absorbed on works programs during transition period.
8. Start without approval of allotment board small projects where additional work must be created.
9. Make recommendations to keep actual work on majority of projects near homes of workers.

All of which makes Mr. Hopkins general overseer, driver, troubleshooter, balancer, and taker-up of slack. He's the man whose job it is to make the works program work.

* * * *

Although most of his adult life has been spent in handing out relief, there is nothing Mr. Hopkins hates more than seeing an American citizen reduced to getting a basket of groceries from either the Governmet or private charity. Throughout he has been clamoring for works relief—anything to put people back at work.

He knows it would be cheaper for the Government to continue the dole, so far as the budget is concerned. But the social cost is, in his opinion, too great to pay. Better give work at greater cost and preserve the unemployed's self-respect. The dole, he feels strongly, is inhuman and, moreover, bad government in the long run.

Therefore, in the present situation, Mr. Hopkins believes that the money should be put out as fast as possible, with the emphasis more on providing work than in improving the capital plant of the Nation. This is the opposite of the Ickes conception. It means emphasis on speed rather than on thorough checks to see that the Government gets value received down to the last red cent.

* * * *

Statisticians can't resist the temptation to figure out comparisons to illustrate the size of the $4,880,000,000 works fund. Some were reported here recently. Now the National Industrial Conference Board offers the information that this sum represents:

About 17 per cent of all wages and salaries earned in the United States.

About 68 per cent of the value of all farm products.

More than twice as much as all dividends paid annually.

About 94 per cent of all interest paid.

Chester Davis, of AAA, has discovered that the trouble over Brazilian cotton competition is as old as the United States Government. In 1800 this country provided less than 1 per cent of the British supply of cotton. Brazil furnished 8 per cent.

Third party talk isn't making much headway. Father Coughlin refused to join in the Farmers Holiday rally at Des Moines and drew the retort that he had "pulled a boner." Neither does he show any inclination to work with Huey Long. And Huey's appearance at the radical farm meeting was embarrassed by the Republicans of the Iowa Legislature who forced through a resolution inviting him to address them. The Kingfish declined. Townsend refused to attend the Des Moines meeting.

The La Follette Progressive Party will observe its first birthday at Fond du Lac, Wis., May 19, but no outside speakers, except Mayor LaGuardia of New York, have been invited. They are trying to keep it a strictly State affair. The La Follettes thus far have shown no disposition to flirt with the Longs, Coughlans and other foot-loose political trumpeters. Senator La Follette, who learned the independent's game at his father's knee, is keeping his own counsel about next year.

Any number of New Dealers make cigarette money by writing magazine articles and books. If, as often is the case, a Government publicity man does the work, the fee is split.

Secretary of Commerce Roper, however, never accepts any honorarium for an article or speech. He has a printed interview which he gives out in response to inquiries on the subject. In it he reproduces letters he has written to editors in returning checks for articles, hoping the editors will understand and with kindest personal regards, etc. The Roper interview, printed in question and answer form, concludes:

"Q. What is your policy with regard to expense of travel?"

"A. I have never submitted a voucher for expenses other than the actual transportation voucher and never then for transportation for any member of my family, confining it entirely to myself. For instance, last summer, when I made an inspection trip through Alaska of the projects and lines of service falling within the Department of Commerce, I went on a Coast Guard boat which was going to Alaska to relieve another boat and returned upon the boat so relieved. However, I sustained the expense of meals for myself as well as the two members of my family who accompanied me and have not, and shall not, under my policy, submit any voucher for the same."

Vanderbilt Story Revealed to Public

Secret Testimony of Trial Printed in New York.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—A story told only to Supreme Court Justice Carew was told publicly today for the first time as the New York News printed portions of hitherto secret testimony in the Gloria Vanderbilt case.

Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt has appealed Justice Carew's decision (depriving her of full custody of her daughter) to the Court of Appeals.

The testimony of Mrs. Morgan, as now disclosed, included an account of a night in 1928 when, she testified, she saw her daughter and Prince Gottfried zu Hohenlohe together.

Mrs. Morgan said that before her daughter's marriage to Vanderbilt "there had been someone else," and that even after the marriage this "someone else" remained in Mrs. Vanderbilt's heart.

Other testimony now made public for the first time includes that of Prince Gottfried zu Hohenlohe. He said that Mrs. Morgan opposed his marriage to Mrs. Vanderbilt and that she expressed a fear he planned some harm to the child.

Gov. Curley's Daughter Announces Engagement

Boston, April 28 (AP).—Formal announcement of the engagement of Miss Mary E. Curley, daughter of Gov. James M. Curley, to Edward C. Donnelly, Boston advertising man and member of the Governor's personal staff, was made today at a large reception and tea at the Curley home.

Among the hundreds of guests was the Rev. James Kelley, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, who will perform the marriage ceremony the first week in June. Whether Miss Curley, after her marriage will give up her duties as her father's official hostess, has not been announced.

9-Year Catalogue Shows Star Secrets

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., April 28.—New secrets of the heavens are disclosed by a nine-year job of cataloguing all the brighter stars, together with a few faint ones of peculiar color or motion, completed tonight at Mount Wilson Observatory.

The work was done by Dr. Walter S. Adams, observatory director, and three assistants.

Dr. Adams, among other things, discovered carbon dioxide gas on Venus, found the amount of free oxygen on Mars was less than 1 per cent of that on the earth and determined that, of the planets, only Venus and Mars were warm enough to permit life in any form.

Parent Congress Opens in Miami

Board of Managers Supports Copeland Measure.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., April 28.—With the board of managers already at work, hundreds of delegates to the thirty-ninth annual convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers arrived here today for the opening session tomorrow.

The board of managers urged the Senate to enact speedily into law the Copeland food and drug measure, first killing amendments which the board believed would weaken effectiveness of the act.

Support of the national congress' 1,727,603 members in the crime control movement was pledged by the board. Representatives will be sent to the White House conference on crime next month.

Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, of Winnetka, Ill., national president, was named to represent the congress at the biennial convention of the World Federation of Education Associations in Oxford, England, during August.

Decrease Seen In 1935 Cotton Grown Abroad

Expansion Called Possible, However, as Cabinet Begins Inquiry.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

On the eve of a Cabinet inquiry into the cotton textile situation, the Department of Agriculture last night forecast a slight reduction in foreign cotton production this year.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported that competitive production, exclusive of China and Russia, is now estimated at 8,842,000 bales for the current crop year as against 8,865,000 bales last year.

At the same time, however, the bureau found that conditions are ripe for a further expansion of foreign cotton production, depending on prices and governmental policies. The prediction was made that foreign acreage will be increased by 5 or more per cent next year.

Thus, while AAA officials found comfort in that part of the report having to do with this season's crop, the outlook for the future was not so favorable. It has been the contention of the AAA all along that the farm program, despite its raising of American prices and curtailment of acreage, has had only a negligible effect on competitive plantings.

10 Per Cent Above Average.

The estimate of foreign cotton production this year is about 10 per cent above the ten-year average up to 1932-33, but is 100,000 bales below the 1925-26 peak. China and Russia are omitted from the forecast because of the small influence those countries have on the world market.

Concerning the effect of the artificial American price on foreign production of cotton, the agricultural bureau commented:

"If American cotton prices during the current season had averaged about 10 cents per pound with the ratio of foreign to domestic cotton prices and the prices of other commodities as they have been, cotton acreage in foreign countries in 1935 would probably be but little, if any, greater than in 1934.

"If American cotton had been around 15 cents, on the other hand, and with other conditions as specified, foreign acreage in 1935-36 might have increased about 10 per cent over the estimated average for the current season."

Meantime, the Foreign Policy Association, in a special report on the AAA cotton program, detected "unmistakable signs that a cotton boom has taken place in a number of foreign countries," particularly Brazil. The report cited a five-fold increase in American exports of cotton gins in 1934.

Study Japanese Angle.

In the report, which was written by John C. deWilde, the suggestion was made that modification of the Administration's 12-cent loan policy and reduction in cotton production costs by more efficient operation "would tend to stimulate demand in the United States as well as abroad."

The special Cabinet committee on cotton, through a four-man subcommittee, will begin a series of conferences at the Department of Commerce this morning, with Maine as the first complainant. Gov. Louis J. Brann, the entire Maine delegation in Congress and a number of textile representatives will appear.

Daily for the next two weeks various other groups from New England and the South will present their arguments for a "new deal" for the textile industry. The data will be compiled by the subcommittee and then passed on to the Cabinet committee, which will make recommendations.

The sub-committee consists of John Dickinson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, chairman; Isador Lubin, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics; Paul Porter, administrative assistant of the AAA, and Alvin H. Hansen, State Department economist. The Cabinet committee, which is expected to sit in part time on proceedings, is composed of Secretaries Roper, chairman; Hull, Wallace and Perkins.

The effect of Japanese competition on the textile industry will be one angle to the investigation. In this connection, the New York Cotton Exchange Service reported yesterday that Japanese cotton mills, despite the depression, have consumed 13.6 per cent more cotton during the first eight months of this season than the corresponding period last year.

Japan now stands second only to the United States as a consumer of raw cotton. In the exportation of cotton goods Japan holds first place, outranking even Great Britain. Cotton cloth exports from Nippon during March were the largest on record. It is the entry of these goods into the American market that has aroused much of textile industry's protest.

Relief Workers Will Hunt Body In Mansion Hide-Out of Gang

By the United Press.

Warwick, R. I., April 28.—FERA workers will be assigned to a murder investigation here tomorrow.

With pick and shovel, sledge and drill, 50 relief laborers will probe all subterranean parts of the old Wendelschaefer mansion — bandit cache and suspected tomb.

In one of six raids resulting in arrest of 20 persons and apparent solution of the Fall River (Mass.) mail robbery of January 23, Federal and local officers seized $8,000 in suspected loot and a small arsenal in a subcellar Saturday.

They are convinced that there, too, will be found the body of Daniel (Danny) Walsh, Rhode Island rum king, who vanished February 2, 1933, and is believed slain.

Walsh, whose relatives made a futile $40,000 ransom payment several months after his disappearance, was once the partner of the fugitive Carlo Rettich, who leases the Wendelschaefer property.

Rettich is sought in connection with the Fall River robbery and is said by police to be the last person seen with Andino (Andy) Merola, whose bullet-riddled body was found in an automobile near Lake Pearl, Wrentham, Mass., Friday. Merola was also sought in the Fall River robbery and was believed slain for fear he would squeal.

In their search of the Wendelschaefer property the 50 FERA workers will rip up the floor of a subbasement, the sunken cement floor of a garage, walls, and even lawns if necessary. Investigators are convinced that other contraband, and probably Walsh's body, will be unearthed.

Thousands of motorists visited the property today, as police heads mapped plans for the strange search. Names of most of the 20 persons arrested in raids here, in Providence, Johnston and Lawrence, Mass., Saturday, in connection with the mail robbery were still withheld.

Liberty League Calls Coal Bill Monopoly Step

Guffey Measure for U. S. Control Is Attacked as Unconstitutional.

The Guffey coal bill, proposing Federal regulation of the bituminous coal industry, was denounced by the American Liberty League yesterday as unconstitutional, injurious to recovery and "a step toward further aggrandizement of an ever-spreading governmental bureaucracy."

Ten specific objections were raised to the bill, which has been reported favorably by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. The measure is authored by Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Pennsylvania Democrat, but has yet to win the indorsement of the White House.

According to the Liberty League, the Guffey proposal is "inconsistent with American principles" and would be followed logically by Government ownership and a further burden on taxpayers and consumers. Government regulation of mining, it is contended, "would be in defiance of numerous court decisions."

Provisions of the bill call for investing control of the bituminous industry in a nine-man commission, which would fix prices with the aid of 21 district boards. In addition, the sum of $300,000,000 would be created to acquire and conserve coal fields.

The Liberty League set out that a declaration by Congress that the bituminous industry is a national public interest and has a bearing on interstate commerce is not enough to make the measure valid from a Constitutional standpoint. The recent opinion of Judge Charles I. Dawson, of Louisville, Ky., holding that Congress has no authority to control production, was cited.

Further, the league asserted that Federal regulation of the bituminous fields would encourage similar action for other industrial groups, such as anthracite coal, oil and lumber. The Guffey bill, according to the league, "definitely tends toward Socialistic control of industry," contrary to the principle of private initiative.

President Denies Son Will Join Staff

Published Reports Untrue, Says Bulletin.

The White House yesterday issued a denial to reports that James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, is to be added to the White House secretariat.

"Several newspapers today printed stories that James Roosevelt, one of the President's sons, is coming to Washington to act as a member of the White House secretariat," the statement said. "These stories are not true."

The continued illness of Secretary Louis McHenry Howe, chief of the secretariat, has given rise to widespread speculation over a new appointment to the President's staff.

Reich Doubles 'Turnover Tax' To Aid Exports

$650,000,000 in Revenue Seen by Levy on Each Handler of Goods.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 28.—Funds equivalent to about $650,000,000 will be raised in the course of the year to help finance German exports in accordance with a decision of the Hitler government under which the so-called turnover tax will be doubled.

After the pronouncement last March by Hjalmar Schacht, minister of economics and head of the Reichsbank, that the way must be found to increase exports, an effort was made to persuade the various branches of the industrial and manufacturing trades to contribute voluntarily to a special export fund. This fund was intended to enable German manufacturers to compete with American, British and other manufacturers of countries with deflated currencies.

The difficulties of apportioning what each branch was to raise were such, however, that the government decided to increase by 100 per cent one of the most unpopular taxes in the Reich, the turnover tax.

This tax demands contributions from each individual handling an article in the process of manufacture.

Before a shoe could be sold, for instance, the farmer selling the cow formerly paid 2 per cent of the sale price to the Government, the butcher selling the hide another 2 per cent, and so on through the tanner, the shoe manufacturer, the wholesaler and retailer.

The Government's decision raises that tax to 4 per cent. Up to now this tax has yielded 1,600,000,000 marks, or about $650,000,000 a year and by doubling it the full amount will become available to compensate exporters for the difference in the price at which they can sell their goods in Germany and the lower price necessitated for sales in places like the United States, Britain, Belgium and the Scandinavian countries.

The whole matter is being treated with great secrecy in order that the enthusiasm of the populace during the May Day activities may not be dampened, for it is anticipated the tax will result inevitably in higher prices for goods.

Soon after May 1, it was reliably reported, the added tax will go into effect.

Rumania Votes Vast New Armament Plan

Bucharest, Rumania, April 28 (AP). A vast national defense scheme to make Rumania the strongest military power in southwestern Europe and the Balkans was approved today at a council session presided over by King Carol.

Details were closely guarded, but it was known the council signed a contract with the Skoda Munitions Works of Czechoslovakia to supply Rumania with ammunition and artillery worth $25,000,000.

It was known also that $220,000,000 was to be spent on a ten-year armament program.

Soldiers Quell Blaze Threat At Fort Meade

Forest Flames Also Menace Country Club; Fires Attract Crowds.

Considerable excitement and little damage resulted yesterday when fires for a time threatened the Fort Meade reservation and the Beaver Dam Country Club. Both fires were quickly brought under control.

A high wind and the dry condition of the low land around the Pennsylvania railroad tracks near Landover, in Montgomery county, necessitated the calling of two fire departments and 50 CCC workers from nearby Beltsville. Five acres of brushland were swept before the blaze was checked.

At Fort Meade soldiers quickly quenched flames which also started near the Pennsylvania tracks and swept across the southern edge of the Army reservation. No outside help was called in.

The Beaver Dam Country Club was in the path of flames, but the Bladensburg and Tuxedo-Cheverly departments, aided by Civilian Conservation Camp workers, beat out the flames before they reached the building. The fire burned for about an hour and a half and attracted many people because of the dense smoke.

It swept through brush and dry grass and burned some scrub trees, but did little material damage.

Officials of county fire departments were on the alert throughout the day because of the dry condition in the woods. They feared that worse fires might get under way. A high wind blew throughout the day, but no other fires were reported.

Warrenton Firemen Fight Woods Blaze

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., April 28.—The Warrenton Fire Co. was called to Mount Holly, near Remington, at 4 p. m. yesterday afternoon to fight a woods fire fanned by a south wind. One truck with ten men of the local company stood by until 8 o'clock.

Masons Assist In Dedication

New $20,000 Station at Glen Echo to Be Completed in Early June.

The corner stone of the new $20,000 fire house at Glen Echo, Md., was formally laid with Masonic dedication exercises Saturday afternoon by officers of the Bethesda Lodge No. 224, F. A. A. M.

A large gathering of local residents, county officials, visiting firemen and civic leaders witnessed a two-hour program that officially dedicated the new structure which will be completed about June 10.

The services were sponsored by the Conduit road fire board, which administers the affairs of the Glen Echo Volunteer Fire Department. Henry T. McCuen, president of the board and mayor of the town of Glen Echo, officiated.

Montgomery County officialdom was represented by County Commissioner Richard H. Lansdale, and Miss Ruth E. Shoemaker, a member of the House of Delegates, from the county.

Papers Sealed in Base.

Sealed in the corner stone were the constitution and by-laws of the fire board, a copy of the bill passed by the State Legislature creating the board, minutes of the first meeting of the board, a notice sent out by the Bethesda lodge, the April, 1935, lodge bulletin, cards of the contracting firm, history of the Glen Echo Volunteer Fire Department, a program of the day's exercises, list of the board of directors of the board, a 1935 cent and a copy of a local newspaper.

Among the speakers were Frederick W. Page, Orville M. Kile, Clarence W. Sands and Lewis H. Odell, all members of the fire board; Daniel Etzler, chief of the fire department; Mrs. Etzler, president of the Ladies Auxiliary to the department; United States Commissioner Charles E. Benson, Town Councilman Ernest D. Houghton, John MacDonald, PWA engineer in charge of the project; Thomas Spence, Ralph S. Morrison, contractor, and Samuel E. Stonebraker, past president of the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce.

Girl Scouts Aid.

Local Girl Scouts and school children led in patriotic singing during the exercises. The Rev. Louis Miltenberger, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Victory, gave the invocation, while the Rev. M. M. Perkins, pastor of Grace Church, gave the benediction. Both ministers, speaking as local residents, also gave short talks.

The exercises opened with a short parade of principals in the program from the Town Hall to the site of the new building on Vassar Circle.

City Councilman's Wife Dies in Alexandria

Mrs. Mary E. Bender, wife of City Councilman George K. Bender, of Alexandria, died yesterday morning in the Alexandria Hospital. Besides her husband she is survived by two daughters and five sons, Mrs. Louise Simms, Miss Grace Bender, Charles, George, Clarence, Gardner and Kelly Bender. She was a member of the Maccabees.

The funeral will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the Baptist Temple. Burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery.

Auxiliary Holds Elections.

Mrs. Deloura Calfee has been elected president of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Stephen Citizens Association of East Riverdale, Md. Other officers are Mrs. Nellie Carson, vice president; Mrs. Margaret Swindell, treasurer, and Mrs. Stephen O'Dea, secretary.

Marine Officer Killed, 5 Hurt In Traffic Toll

Lieut. Heinricks Victim of Head-On Collision Near Fredericksburg.

A Marine officer was killed and five persons were injured yesterday as Sunday motorists jammed streets and highways in and near Washington. Local and nearby county authorities reported the heaviest traffic in recent months, but said mishaps were comparatively few.

First Lieut. Louis M. Heinricks, 31, of Quantico, Va., was killed when his automobile struck a produce truck 2 miles north of Fredericksburg on the Richmond-Washington highway.

Lieut. Heinricks was on his way to Fredericksburg alone, when, according to State Highway Patrolman Sam Sneed, his car crashed into the northbound truck driven by Vinton Pennington, of Crockett. Pennington was not injured.

Investigation of the crash by Sneed, Coroner J. C. Gordan and Trial Justice Henry Chichester resulted in the exoneration of Pennington from any blame in connection with the crash. Lieut. Heinricks' car was on the left-hand side of the road when the truck was struck, officers said. Horace Barker, of Fredericksburg, who pulled Heinricks from his demolished automobile said the lieutenant had been traveling at a high rate of speed. His body was mangled.

Taken to Quantico.

Lieut. Heinricks was assigned to Company A at Quantico. He was a native of Menominee, Mich. His body was taken to Quantico to await burial. He was unmarried.

In Washington, William Bell, 39, of 314 Maryland avenue northeast, was taken to Emergency Hospital with injuries of his head and legs. He had been struck by an auto at Sixth and G streets northwest. Phisicians said his condition was not serious.

Injured in a crash at Fifteenth and C streets northeast, Conley E. Galliher, 22, of 3614 Thirty-fourth street northeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital for lacerations on his face and head. He was released after first aid.

Lillian Pratt, colored, 9, of 610 R street northwest, was struck by an automobile near her home and was taken to Children's Hospital in an undetermined condition. She suffered head injuries and a fractured right arm.

Hazen Kennedy, 15, of 4909 Fourteenth street northwest, was injured in an accident on Conduit road near the District line. He was admitted to Georgetown Hospital with severe lacerations of the face and body.

James Maynard, 35, of 1122 Thirteenth street northwest, was also admitted to Georgetown Hospital with lacerations and bruises. He was injured in a crash in nearby Arlington County.

D. C. Driver Involved In Crash Fatal to 3

By the United Press.

Hanover, Mass., April 28.—A joy ride to White Horse Beach, Plymouth, ended tragically for three Boston couples here today when their homeward-bound automobile rammed into a tree, leaving three dead and two critically injured.

Alice Rogers, 20; David J. Aleo, 22, and John C. Feeney, 23, were killed.

Helen Rogers, 22, sister of Alice, and Mary Hines, 19, suffered serious head, spine and arm injuries and are in critical condition at Cohasset and Plymouth hospitals.

Louis Kenney, the driver, escaped with minor injuries. He was charged with manslaughter, recklessness and driving without license. The son of James Kenney, of Washington, D. C., he was emplyoed in a hotel at Hollywood Beach, Fla., until recently. Kenney lives with his grandmother in Boston.

Thomas J. Rogers, father of the Rogers girls, is blind and the mother is a charwoman. Feeney was the only son of a widower.

2 D. C. Crash Victims Treated in Virginia

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 28.—The extent of injuries to Mrs. Stephen Borowski, 2413 Eighteenth street northwest, and John E. Moran, 1110 D street southeast, Washington, injured late yesterday on Massanutten Mountain near New Market, was reported at Rockingham Memorial Hospital tonight as undetermined. Both spent a fairly comfortable day. Mrs. Borowski suffered an injury to her back, and Moran was cut about the head.

Mrs. John E. Moran, wife and sister of the victims in the hospital, died a few minutes after reaching the hospital and the body was sent to Washington for burial. Stephen Borowski and son, Stephen, jr., are here with the injured.

The car, drven by Moran, overturned in descending the mountain and crashed into a tree. All three occupants were semi-conscious and their identity was established only by papers found in their pockets. They were en route to Natural Bridge for the week-end.

3-Power Meeting Called for May 4

Preliminary Session Set on Danubian Problems.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 28.—A conference among Italy, Austria and Hungary was announced today for May 4 at Venice in preparation for the conference of Danubian nations, fixed at Stresa, which will be held in Rome some time in June.

The Italo-Austro-Hungarian meeting is in accordance with a consultation pact signed by the three nations last year, under which they agreed to consult one another before taking any action which might affect any of them.

Italy will be represented by Fulvio Suvich, under-secretary for foreign affairs; Austria by Foreign Minister Egon Berger-Waldenegg, and Hungary by Foreign Minister Koloman von Kanya. The meeting will be held probably on the mainland instead of at the Lido, where the Hitler-Mussolini conversations took place, because the Lido will not be open on May 5.

The three statesmen will discuss the line of argument they will pursue at the Danubian conference.

"It matters little that they mass around the flag of social revolution. They are inspired by a false conception of the world and life. Whether they are possessed by superstition of race and blood, their philosophy, as that of others, rests upon principles essentially opposed to those of the Christian faith. And on such principles the Church does not consent to form a compact with them at any price."

Praying for peace "for the rest of our days," Cardinal Pacelli said, "We are lost in the midst of a tempest troubling the ocean of society and peoples, but in the cross of Christ, which stands amidst world cataclysms, reside our confidence and our hope."

A quarter of a million religious pilgrims participated in the climax of the eucharistic triduum. Cardinal Pacelli said the last mass of the continuous 72-hour rites.

From Vatican City, Pope Pius, using the radio, delivered an impassioned prayer today for peace and good will in the world.

His prayer, addressed to the Virgin Mary, was occasioned by the ceremonies here.

"Immaculate queen of peace have mercy on us, immaculate queen of peace pray for us, immaculate queen of peace intercede for us," his holiness implored prior to blessing the multitude at Lourdes via the radio.

His words were broadcast in Latin from his study in the Vatican.

"Oh mother of charity and mercy," the Holy Father continued, "who assisted your sweetest son while on the cross he achieved the redemption of the human race, being yourself a partaker and participator in his agony; and who from your sacred grotto (the Pope referred to the grotto at Lourdes) have deigned to bless so many bishops and priests from all the Catholic orb who have here renovated the triduum of sacrifice of the cross—we beg and pray of you the precious fruits of redemption and of your passion.

"You who are the mother of all, concede that in the purity of custom and dignity of life, in the unity of mind and concordance of souls, the peace of the peoples remaining safe, that we may finally enjoy in emperturbability the gift of peace. Amen."

The Pope's prayer of benediction followed an afternoon service at the Vatican over which he presided.

Catholics Ask Nazis Protect Their Schools

Cardinal Bertram Scores Unscrupulous Tactics in Pastoral Letter.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 28.—Roman Catholics throughout Germany began today an intensive campaign for the maintenance of their parochial schools as guaranteed in the vatican concordat.

Observers attached significance to the campaign, to be pursued throughout a so-called "educational week," in view of the present strained situation between German churches and the state.

Roman Catholics are known to feel that the existence of their schools is jebpardized by the Nazi drive for "one nation, one school."

Hits Unscrupulous Methods.

In a pastoral letter, Cardinal Bertram of Breslau, the senior German cardinal, exhorted the faithful to hold steadfastly to the principle of religious education.

His letter was frankly and gravely apprehensive of the effects which Nazi schooling would have, he said, on young minds removed at a receptive age from the religious care of parents.

The Nazis' charge that religious education makes for schism was answered by the cardinal's emphatic statement that "religions dissension is caused not by believing Christians—who in this matter stand commendably shoulder to shoulder—but by those who would force a new faith upon the people even by the most oppressive and unscrupulous methods."

Concordat Cited.

The compulsory transference of some 30,000 Catholic children of both sexes between 13 and 14 years of age to undenominational schools in accordance with the Nazi scheme to "smooth out religious differences," was regarded as extremely dangerous by Cardinal Bertram. He cited article 23 of the concordat which provides that "maintenance and extension of Catholic confessional schools is guaranteed."

In the Catholic Kirchenblatt of Berlin, Father Schroeteler of the Society of Jesus, also urged the faithful to continue the fight for religious instruction as the rock foundation of civic morality.

"Educational week" is to continue until May 5.

Meanwhile, at Trier, the Catholic Paulinusblatt was seized by secret police. No reason was assigned for the action.

Il Duce Warns Italy of Coming Test of Force

Crowd Puzzled by Message, But Believes He Meant Trouble in Africa.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 28.—Premier Mussolini warned Italy today on Rome's 3,688th birthday of a "hard period" in the immediate future which will "engage all the forces of the Italian people."

Addressing 15,000 fascist workers in Venezia Square on Italy's Labor Day, Il Duce said that while a clearing horizon was apparent, it was necessary for Italians to concentrate on reaching "those ends which we have already precisely determined."

The crowd was uncertain as to what Mussolini meant by "those ends," most of them believeing he referred to an East African colonial project which has drawn more than 30,000 tropos into Eritrea and Somaliland because of border troubles with Ethiopia.

"From last year on," declared Mussolini in ringing tones from a platform erected before his office building, the Venezia Palace, "we have proceeded, some will say slowly. But I answer we have gone slowly in order not to go backward.

"The situation has bettered. Unemployment has diminished. The horizon has cleared and could become more clear if political policy aided economic policy; if there were in Europe a true peace, a strong, virile peace which does not depress."

Pointing his flinger at the crowd, Il Duce said: "I know you well. I read in your eyes what are your most intimate hopes and your spirit. I know you are not looking for a comfortable life."

With added slowness and force he continued:

"Therefore, I announce to you the approach of a hard period which will engage all the forces of the Italian people to reach those ends which we have already precisely determined.

"Raise up your muskets and banners! Give a cheer for work!"

Dressed in the uniform of a Fascist corporal, Mussolini began his address by condemning those who talked too much.

"But I know well," he said, "that the Italian people * * * will know how to expel them."

He said the distinction which still exists between manual and intellectual labor "has merely a scholastic value," and declared the time will come "when the so-called intellectuals will feel the need to work * * * in order to make contact with those realties such as earth, sea, and the material which one bends and which one forges wealth and power."

Il Duce was given a resounding ovation when he finished his speech and began distributing 1,000 old-age and injury pension certificates and an equal number of "merit of labor" medals to workmen who had distinguished themselves by long or outstanding performance in industry and agriculture.

After the speech Mussolini began a busy round of inspections which served to inaugurate various archeological reconstructions and public works in Rome.

Britons Vote 9-1 in Favor Of Peace Plan

First National Referendum Shows Biggest Total for the League.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 28.—In the first national referendum ever held in Great Britain on any issue, the English are piling up an overwhelming vote in favor of peace measures—adherence to the League of Nations, abolition of military planes and of private manufacture of arms.

Nearly 7,000,000 English men and women have voted in a referendum being conducted by Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, an internationalist, 71 years old, who is nearing completion of the biggest task in a long career.

The vote is by canvas and will be finished June 27. Figures as announced, with a total vote of 6,815,537, are:

Adherence to the League of Nations, 6,616,313, or 97.1 per cent.

For general disarmament, 92.5 per cent.

For abolition of military planes, 85 per cent.

For abolition of private manufacture of arms, 93 per cent.

For collective security by economic action, 94 per cent.

For collective security by military measures if necessary, 74.1 per cent.

"I am confident we will have close to 10,000,000 votes when the final results are announced on June 27," said Lord Cecil in an interview today. "When you consider there are just 29,000,000 registered voters in Britain, that means getting a good proportion. We have had up to 90 per cent in some districts."

Lord Cecil has served as president of the League of Nations Union since it was formed in 1919, holding the office jointly with Lord Grey, his former war-time chief in the British foreign office, up to the time of the latter's death.

4 Held in Maryland On Liquor Law Charges

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chestertown, Md., April 28.—Four men arrested today on charges of violating Federal liquor laws will be given hearings before Commissioner William R. Horney at Centreville. Graham Lockerman, 50, of Warwick, Cecil County; Harry Shaw, 35, Fredericktown, and James Brown, 28, colored, also of Fredericktown, were arrested by Sheriff John N. Bennett. They allegedly were transporting two five gallon cans of illicit liquor. All are in jail here.

James Whittington, 55, colored, is held in the Queen Annes County Jail, Centreville. A 30 gallon still allegedly was found in his home near here.

Fire Destroys Cottage Near Waynesboro, Pa.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., April 28.—Fire early yesterday destroyed the two-and-a-half-story cottage owned by Jacob H. Shockey, Waynesboro, Route 4, located at Pen Mar Park. It was the second fire in the South Mountain resort section in 24 hours, the cottage of Miss Bland S. Taylor, Roanoke, Va., having burned yesterday. Shockey estimated the loss at $4,000.

The house was occupied by Mrs. Catherine McKendricks and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Starliper.

Boston Session Of G.O.P. Holds Political Stage

New England Rally Will Crystalize Roosevelt Fight Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

Republicans looking to the 1936 campaign promised yesterday to center current political briskness on a Boston regional meeting tomorrow after a week-end of Democratic attractions staged by the Roosevelt and Long wings of the party.

Crystalization of opposition to President Roosevelt's Administration was expected by Republicans at the New England conference of leaders of six States as a forerunner to other projected regional gatherings.

The fact that Representative Christianson of Minnesota, former Republican Governor of that Northwestern State, was one of the principal speakers scheduled for the New England assembly was viewed here by Republicans and Democrats alike as a move to bring closer together the Western and Eastern G. O. P. wings for the Presidential battle next year.

Long Claims Iowa.

Headed back to Washington from Des Moines, where he claimed he "conquered" Iowa in his address Saturday to the National Farm Holiday Association, Senator Long (Democrat), of Louisiana, appeared more confident that his share-the-wealth plan would make inroads into the New Deal next year.

A message sent to the meeting by Sinclair Lewis, defeated Democratic candidate for Governor of California, urging that workers and unemployed capture the Democratic Party and abandon ideas of forming a third party, was interpreted by observers here as a further deterrent to a third party movement.

This capped word that Father Charles E. Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice would pursue an independent course. This would wipe out suggestions of a possible union of the Long, Coughlin and Lewis groups.

Farley Indicates Trend.

However, indications that Roosevelt leaders were paying more attention to these New Deal critics were substantiated last night in New York when Postmaster General James A. Farley assailed "the quacks of politics and economics who talk about the redistribution of wealth and seek to allure American people into adopting policies which they promise would make everybody rich."

Farley did not mention Long's name but referred twice to his share the wealth program.

He also assailed Herbert Hoover, Senator Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, young Theodore Roosevelt and Ogden Mills for their criticism of the New Deal, terming the last three the "white hopes" of the Republican Party in 1936.

Text of the President's Message

anything about what the people of the United States are thinking about." That is why I occasionally leave this scene of action for a few days to go fishing or back back home to Hyde Park so that I can have a chance to think quietly about the country as a whole. To get away from the trees, as they say, and to look at the whole woods. This duty of seeing the country in a long range perspective is one which, in a very special manner, attaches to this office to which you have chosen me.

Did you ever stop to think that there are, after all, only two positions in the Nation that are filled by the vote of all of the voters—the President and the Vice President? That makes it particularly necessary for the Vice President and for me to conceive of our duty toward the entire country. I speak, therefore, tonight to and of the American people as a whole.

My most immediate concern is in carrying out the purposes of the great work program just enacted by the Congress. Its first objective is to put men and women now on the relief rolls to work and, incidentally, to assist materially in our already unmistakable march toward recovery. I shall not confuse my discussion by a multitude of figures. So many figures are quoted to prove so many things. Sometimes it depends upon what paper you read and what broadcast you hear. Therefore, let us keep our minds on two or three simple essential facts in connection with this problem of unemployment. It is true that while business and industry are definitely better our relief rolls are still too large. However, for the first time in five years the relief rolls have declined instead of increased during the winter months. They are still declining. The simple fact is that many million more people have private work today than two years ago today or one year ago today and every day that passes offers more chances to work for those who want to work. In spite of the fact that unemployment remains a serious problem here as in every other nation, we have come to recognize the possibility and the necessity of certain helpful remedial measures. These measures are of two kinds. The first is to make provisions intended to relieve, to minimize, and to prevent future unemployment; the second is to establish the practical means to help those who are unemployed in this present emergency. Our social security legislation is an attempt to answer the first of these questions. Our work relief program the second.

The program for social security now pending before the Congress is a necessary part of the future unemployment policy of the Government. While our present and projected expenditures for work relief are wholly within the reasonable limits of our national credit resources, it is obvious that we can not continue to create governmental deficits for that purpose year after year. We must begin now to make provision for the future. That is why our social security program is an important part of the complete picture. It proposes, by means of old-age pensions, to help those who have reached the age of retirement to give up their jobs and thus give to the younger generation greater opportunities for work and to give to all a feeling of security as they look toward old age.

Incentive to Planning in Private Business.

The unemployment insurance part of the legislation will not only help to guard the individual in future periods of lay-off against dependence upon relief, but it will, by sustaining purchasing power, cushion the shock of economic distress. Another helpful feature of unemployment insurance is the incentive it will give to employers to plan more carefully in order that unemployment may be prevented by the stabilizing of employment itself.

Provisions for social security, however, are protections for the future. Our responsibility for the immediate necessities of the unemployed has been met by the Congress through the most comprehensive work plan in the history of the Nation. Our problem is to put to work 3,500,000 employable persons now on the relief rolls. It is a problem quite as much for private industry as for the Government.

We are losing no time getting the Government's vast work relief program under way and we have every reason to believe that it should be in full swing by autumn. In directing it, I shall recognize six fundamental principles:

1. The projects should be useful.

2. Projects shall be of a nature that a considerable proportion of the money spent will go into wages for labor.

3. Projects which promise ultimate return to the Federal Treasury of a considerable proportion of the costs, will be sought.

4. Funds allotted for each project should be actually and promtly spent and not held over until later years.

5. In all cases projects must be of a character to give employment to those on the relief rolls.

6. Projects will be allocated to localities or relief areas in relation to the number of workers on relief rolls in those areas.

I next want to make it clear exactly how we shall direct the work.

1. I have set up a division of application and information, to which all proposals for the expenditure of money must go for preliminary study and consideration.

2. After the division of application and information has sifted these projects they will be sent to an allotment division, composed of representatives of the more important governmental agencies charged with carrying on work relief projects. The group will also include representatives of cities and of labor, farming, banking and industry. This allotment division will consider all of the recommendations submitted to it and such projects as they approve will be next submitted to the President, who, under the act, is required to make final allocations.

3. The next step will be to notify the proper Government agency in whose field the project falls, and also another agency which I am creating—a Progress Division. This division will have the duty of co-ordinating the purchase of materials and supplies and of making certain that people who are employed will be taken from the relief rolls. It will also have the responsibility of determining work payments in various localities, of making full use of existing employment services and to assist people engaged in work relief to move as rapidly as possible back into private employment when such employment is available. Moreover, this division will be charged with keeping projects moving on schedule.

4. I have felt it to be essentially wise and prudent to avoid, so far as possible, the creation of new governmental machinery for supervising this work. The national Government now has at least 60 different agencies with the staff and experience and the competence necessary to carry on the 250 or 300 kinds of work that will be undertaken. These agencies, therefore, will simply be doing on a somewhat enlarged scale, the same sort of things that they have been doing. This will make certain that the largest possible portion of the funds allotted will be spent for actually creating new work and not for building up expensive overhead organizations here in Washington.

Pledges Great Effort To Use Funds Effectively.

For many months preparations have been under way for undertaking this work. The allotment of funds for desirable projects has already begun. The key men for the major responsibilities of this great task already have been selected. I well realize that the country is expecting before this year is out to see the "dirt fly," as they say, in carrying on this work and I assure my fellow citizens that no energy will be spared in using these funds effectively to make a major attack upon the problem of unemployment.

Our responsibility is to all of the people in this country. This is a great national crusade to destroy enforced idleness which is an enemy of the human spirit generated by this depression. Our attack upon these enemies must be without stint and without discrimination. No sectional, no political distinctions can be permitted. It must, however, be recognized that when an enterprise of this character is extended over more than 3,000 counties throughout the Nation, there may be occasional instances of inefficiency, bad management, or misuse of funds. When cases of this kind occur, there will be those, of course, who will try to tell you that the exceptional failure is characteristic of the entire endeavor. It should be remembered that in every big job there are some imperfections. There are chiselers in every walk of life, there are those in every industry who are guilty of unfair practices, every profession has its black sheep, but long experience in government has taught me that the exceptional instances of wrong-doing in government are probably less numerous than in almost every other line of endeavor. The most effective means of preventing such evils in this work relief program will be the eternal vigilance of the American people themselves. I call upon my fellow citizens everywhere to co-operate with me in making this the most efficient and the cleanest example of public enterprise the world has ever seen. It is time to provide a smashing anwer for those cynical men who say that a Democracy can not be honest and efficient. If you will help, this can be done. I, therefore, hope you will watch the work in every corner of this Nation. Feel free to criticize. Tell me of instances where work can be done better, or where improper practices prevail. Neither you nor I want criticism conceived in a purely fault-finding or partisan spirit, but I am jealous of the right of every citizen to call to the attention of his Government examples of how the public money can be more effectively spent for the benefit of the American people.

I now come, my friends, to the remaining business before the Congress. It has under consideration many measures which provide for the rounding out of the program of economic and social reconstruction with which we have been concerned for two years. I can mention only a few of them tonight, but I do not want my mention of specific measures to be interpreted as lack of interest in or disapproval of many other important proposals that are pending.

Says U. S. Must Cling To Gains Under NRA.

The national industrial recovery act expires on the sixteenth of June. After careful consideration, I have asked the Congress to extend the life of this useful agency of government. As we have proceeded with the administration of this act, we have found from time to time more and more useful ways of promoting its purposes. No reasonable person wants to abandon our present gains—we must continue to protect children, to enforce minimum wages, to prevent excessive hours, to safeguard, define and enforce collective bargaining, and, while retaining fair competition, to eliminate so far as humanly possible the kinds of unfair practices by selfish minorities which unfortunately did more than anything else to bring about the recent collapse of industries.

There is likewise pending before the Congress legislation to provide for the elimination of unnecessary holding companies in the public utility field.

I consider this legislation a positive recovery measure. Power production in this country is virtually back to the 1929 peak. The operating companies in the gas and electric utility field are by and large in good condition. But under holding company domination the utility industry has long been hopelessly at war within itself and with public sentiment. By far the greater part of the general decline in utility securities had occurred before I was inaugurated. The absentee management of unnecessary holding company control has lost touch with and has lost the sympathy of the communities it pretends to serve. Even more significantly it has given the country as a whole an uneasy apprehension of overconcentrated economic power.

A business that loses the confidence of its customers and the good will of the public can not long continue to be a good risk for the investor. This legislation will serve the investor by ending the conditions which have caused that lack of confidence and good will. It will put the public utility operating industry on a sound basis for the future, both in its public relations and in its internal relations.

This legislation will not only in the long run result in providing lower electric and gas rates to the consumer, but it will protect the actual value and earning power of properties now owned by thousands of investors who have little protection under the old laws against what used to be called frenzied finance. It will not destroy values.

Confidence in Banks Held Major Result.

Not only business recovery, but the general economic recovery of the Nation will be greatly stimulated by the enactment of legislation designed to improve the status of our transportation agencies. There is need for legislation providing for the regulation of interstate transportation by buses and trucks, to regulate transportation by water, new provisions for strengthening our Merchant Marine and air transport measures for the strengthening of the Interstate Commerce Commission to enable it to carry out a rounded conception of the national transportation system in which the benefits of private ownership are retained, while the public stake in these important services is protected by the public's government.

The re-establishment of public confidence in the banks of the Nation is one of the most hopeful results of our efforts as a Nation to re-establish public confidence in private banking. We all know that private banking actually exists by virtue of the permission of and regulation by the people as a whole, speaking through their government. Wise public policy, however, requires not only that banking be safe, but that its resources be most fully utilized, in the economic life of the country. To this end it was decided more than 20 years ago that the Government should assume the responsibility of providing a means by which the credit of the Nation might be controlled, not by a few private banking institutions, but by a body with public prestige and authority. The answer to this demand was the Federal Reserve System. Twenty years of experience with this system have justified the efforts made to create it, but these 20 years have shown by experience definite possibilities for improvement. Certain proposals made to amend the Federal Reserve act deserve prompt and favorable action by the Congress. They are a minimum of wise readjustment of our Federal Reserve System in the light of past experience and present needs.

These measures are, in large part, the program which under my constitutional duty I have recommended to the Congress. They are essential factors in a rounded program for national recovery. They contemplate the enrichment of our national life by a sound and rational ordering of its various elements and wise provisions for the protection of the weak against the strong. Never since my inauguration in March, 1933, have I felt so unmistakably the atmosphere of recovery. But it is more than the recovery of the material basis of our individual lives. It is the recovery of confidence in our Democratic processes and institutions. We have survived all of the arduous burdens and the threatening dangers of a great economic calamity. We have, in the darkest moments of our national trials, retained our faith in our own ability to master our destiny. Fear is vanishing and confidence is growing on every side, renewed faith in the vast possibilities of human beings to improve their material and spiritual status through the instrumentality of Democratic government. That faith is receiving its just reward.

For that we can be thankful to the God who watches over America.

Biscuit Firm Strike Settled in Two Cities

New York, April 28 (AP).—Final settlement of the protracted strike of several thousand employes of the National Biscuit Co. in New York and Philadelphia was announced today by union officials and Roy E. Tomlinson, president of the company. They said striking employes in both cities would return to work Monday morning.

Tomlinson said settlement of the strike was brought about largely through efforts of Lewis Hines, American Federation of Labor, and Charles Kutz, Pennsylvania State Department of Labor, who conducted negotiations with company officials and representatives of the Inside Bakery Workers Federal Union.

Sen. Dickinson Fears U. S. Debt Repudiation

Chicago, April 28 (AP).—Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, in an address last night warned that repudiation of Government securities is one of the perils of overspending by the "New Deal" Administration. He spoke before the Illinois Women's Bar Association.

"A $3,000,000,000 or $4,000,000,000 program can not solve the unemployment problem," he said. "If you have a 10 per cent decrease in the value of Government bonds, you will close every bank in the Federal Reserve System."

acteristic of the entire endeavor. It should be remembered that in every big job there are some imperfections."

Vigilance Held Safeguard.

The most effective means of preventing evils will be the eternal vigilance of the American people themselves, the President asserted. He asked that the people co-operate "in making this the most efficient and cleanest example of public enterprise the world has ever seen."

"Feel free to criticize," he said. "Tell me of instances where work can be done better or where improper practices prevail. Neither you nor I want criticism conceived in a purely fault-finding or partisan spirit, but I am jealous of the right of every citizen to call to the attention of his Government examples of how the public money can be more effectively spent for the benefit of the American people."

As to his "must" program, the President said that in listing a few proposals he did not wish to give the impressions that he lacked interest in other important legislation.

Referring to the NRA, the President said:

"No reasonable person wants to abandon our present gains—we must continue to protect children, to enforce minimum wages, to prevent excessive hours, to safeguard, define and enforce collective bargaining and, while retaining fair competition, to eliminate so far as humanly possible, the kinds of unfair practices by selfish minorities which unfortunately did more than anything else to bring about the recent collapse of industries."

Lauds Holding Company Bill.

The President hurried on to consideration of holding company legislation.

"I consider this legislation a positive recovery measure," he said.

Power production, he said, is virtually back to the 1929 peak, and operating companies in the gas and electric fields are in good condition.

"But under holding company domination," he continued, "the utility industry has long been hopelessly at war within itself and with public sentiment."

He said the holding company system "has given the country, as a whole, an uneasy apprehension of overconcentrated economic power."

"A business that loses the confidence of its customers and the good will of the public can not long continue to be a good risk for the investor," he added.

"This legislation will not only in the long run result in providing lower electric and gas rates to the consumer, but it will protect the actual value and earning power of properties now owned by thousands of investors who have little protection under the old laws against what used to be called frenzied finance. It will not destroy values."

Refers to Other Moves.

Referring briefly to transportation legislation, the President expressed the opinion recovery would be greatly stimulated by this legislation. He pointed to the need for regulation of interstate transportation of the newer type and for protection of the public's stake in the transportation business.

Turning to banking legislation, the President said that "re-establishment of public confidence in the banks of the Nation is one of the most hopeful results in our efforts as a nation to re-establish public confidence in private banking."

He described the banking legislation as "a minimum of wise readjustment of our Federal Reserve system in the light of past experience and present needs."

He closed his talk with these words:

"Fear is vanishing and confidence is grownig on every side, renewed faith in the vast possibilities of human beings to improve their material and spiritual status through the instrumentality of democratic government. That faith is receiving its just reward."

Fall Takes Life Of D. C. Worker

Peter Kelly, 56, an employe of the Washington Gaslight Co., was injured fatally yesterday when he fell 12 feet from a platform at the company's plant, Twenty-sixth and G streets northwest. He died in Emergency Hospital.

Stephen Costello, of the 1300 block of E street northeast, a fellow-worker, told police he was talking to Kelly when the latter turned and started down a flight of steps leading from the second floor to a platform on a large oil heater. Kelly, he said, lost his balance and fell.

The injured man was given first-aid treatment by a private physician and then taken to the hospital. He died a few hours later of a skull fracture. Kelly, an employe of many years' service, lived at 2418 G street northwest.

30,000,000-Year-Old Louse Is Discovered

By the Associated Press.

The Interior Department added to its collection of big game and geological specimens yesterday a louse—30,000,000 years old.

So minute that he was discovered only by a microscope during a study of a bit of oil shale, the insect was embedded in a thin section of translucent rock. W. C. Mendenhall, director of the Geological Survey, says the louse probably was preserved in a jelly of decaying vegetable matter at the bottom of a great lake once covering parts of Colorado and Utah.

Thugs Attack 3 On D. C. Streets

Bold Bandits Find Victims Downtown Here; Get Cash, Jewelry.

Three men—one of them an out-of-town visitor—were attacked and robbed on downtown streets early yesterday, police were told.

Joseph M. Emanuel, of Harrisonburg, Pa., said he was walking near Seventh street and Mount Vernon place northwest when three colored men forced him into an alley. One of them, he reported, drew a knife, while the others rifled his pockets of $7 in cash and jewelry valued at $22.

While walking near Fourth and N streets northwest Norman Bruce, of the 1200 block of New Jersey avenue northwest, said he was attacked by three colored men and robbed of $1.50. In both cases, descriptions of the bandits tallied, police reported.

Gery E. Wood, a taxi driver, of the First block of M street northwest, said he was hailed by two men near Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest and told to drive to Wisconsin avenue and M streets northwest. En route, he declared, one of his passengers shoved a "hard object" against his back and demanded money. Wood said he surrendered $4. The robbers then ordered him out and sped away with his taxi, Wood reported.

Alleged Moonshiner Arrested by Agents

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 28.—Federal agents finally caught up with Charles C. Kuhn, Kolfsville section, whom they said had boasted he would never be caught moonshining, and today he is held on $1,000 bond for the Federal court on a charge of operating an unlicensed still and having untaxed liquor in his possession. Two agents said that they seized 200 gallons of mash and nine barrels of liquor, besides a 30-gallon still and other equipment.

Kuhn refused to admit the agents to his house, but one stood guard while the other came to Hagerstown and obtained a search warrant.

Underwriters to Advertise.

New York, April 28 (AP).—Theodore M. Riehle, president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, said today life insurance companies will place $100,000 of newspaper advertising during the week of May 13-18 as part of the observance of Life Insurance Week. The advertising expenditure is indicative, he said, of the belief held by life insurance in business recovery.

Company Union Bill Up.

The American Federation of Labor group is expected to present at its meeting today a unanimous demand for enactment of the Wagner labor disputes bill. Representatives of international unions, State federations of labor and of local labor councils gathering for the meeting said they expected to call upon Senators and Representatives to produce speedy action on the bill.

The bill outlaws company unions. It has not been reported out in either house, but extended hearings have been held. The measure is being opposed by business generally.

This proposed legislation probably will be included in a great many subjects under discussion at the Chamber of Commerce meeting. The chamber, it is expected, will elect a new president to succeed Henry I. Harriman, who has headed the organization for three years. The new chamber head is expected to be Harper Sibley, Rochester, N. Y., farmer, banker and industrialist.

Today's session will include meetings of the National Council of the Chamber of Commerce, the International Chamber of Commerce and the American Trade Association Executives. Speakers at the council meeting will be Harriman, W. F. Gephart, vice president of the First National Bank of St. Louis; Paul B. Sommers, chairman of the executive committee of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, Newark, N. J., and Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, surgeon general of the United States.

Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machines Co., New York, will preside at the International Chamber meeting. Speakers will be Sir A. Ernest Bain, insurance man of Leeds, England, and Dr. Harvey N. Davis, president of the Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, N. J.

Among the speakers at the Trade Association Executives meeting will be Prentiss Coonley, NRA code administration director, and Dr. Leon C. Marshall, a member of the National Industrial Recovery Board. Secretary Roper will speak at a dinner of the executives tomorrow night.

The first general session of the chamber convention will be held tomorrow morning. This will be followed by group meetings at which a wide variety of business and Government problems will be discussed. Another general session, followed by group meetings, will be held Wednesday. The convention will end Wednesday night with a dinner at which Henry J. Allen, former Governor of Kansas, will be the principal speaker.

Administration Today to Seek Filibuster End

Roosevelt Impatient at Lynching Bill Delay, Congress Hears.

By the Associated Press.

Democratic leaders, already twice defeated, determined yesterday on a powerful effort to break the Senate's anti-lynching filibuster today and clear the way for progress on the Harrison bonus compromise and pressing Administration legislation.

Reports were circulated that President Roosevelt had signified impatience with the Senate's slow progress on Administration measures despite optimistic expressions from some Democrats that Congress can complete its business and go home July 1.

Strategy devised to side-track the anti-lynching measure involved adoption first of Senator Costigan's (Democrat), of Colorado, motion to take up this bill. Then immediately Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, would move to consider the bonus bill. If Harrison's motion carried, the anti-lynching bill would be shunted back to the calendar.

To Poll Members.

However, opponents of the anti-lynching measure headed by Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, expressed dislike of this program, claiming the Senate should not even consider that type of legislation. They served notice on leaders of a continued fight to defeat Costigan's motion.

Nevertheless, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, planned to make a poll of the membership today to discover whether enough votes can be mustered to lay aside the anti-lynching bill. The leaders already have found considerable strength for the measure as evidenced by two losing attempts to sidetrack it.

As early as possible Harrison planned to confer with President Roosevelt on a proposal for continuing NRA unchanged pending a Supreme Court ruling on its wage and hour fundamentals.

Debate Banking Bill.

Harrison indicated he would concentrate for the present on the bonus, behind which were clogged in his Finance Committee the NRA and social security bills. Advocates of the Patman currency expansion plan and the Vinson measure leaving it to the Treasury to pay the bill, were preparing for assaults on the Harrison compromise, which the Mississippian says the President will sign.

The House today begins 15 hours of debate on the omnibus banking bill, which Chairman Steagall of the Banking Committee concedes will concentrate additional power over the credit of the Nation in the Federal Reserve Board.

Democratic leaders confidently predicted the House will pass the measure, but were fearful of what will happen to it in the Senate. Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the Banking subcommittee in charge of it, has opposed openly many of its features.

Difficulty in getting the Rayburn-Wheeler utility holding company bill whipped into shape for presentation to the House was encountered by the House Interstate Commerce Committee, while hearings on it were to continue before the Senate committee.

Turning a cold shoulder to suggestions of Secretary Morgenthau that taxes be boosted by from $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 to pay the bonus, the House Ways and Means Committee nevertheless was scheduled to meet to map its program to continue some $420,000,000 in miscellaneous taxes which otherwise would expire around July 1, and to consider strengthening anti-smuggling laws.

Members of Congress See Police in Action

Demonstrating to members of the House Committee on Military Affairs, that New York's police could handle any emergency in Wall street, Mayor LaGuardia turned in a surprise alarm and shortly afterward 450 policemen arrived at the Sub-Treasury Building. The Mayor, shown with committee in center, contended Army post at Governors Island is not necessary.

Reno's Farmers Urge Labor Aid For Third Party

Action 'at Once' Proposed by Holiday Association at Des Moines.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, April 28.—The National Farmers Holiday Association today advocated foundation of a third national political party after a stormy business session in which a group of alleged Communists were ousted by Milo Reno, national president.

The resolution presented by an official committee of the association called upon farmers and laborers to join in the move for the third party. It was approved by the convention.

The action reversed previous assertions of leaders disclaiming any intention of forming a third party.

Want Action at Once.

During the convention both Reno and Senator Huey Long of Louisiana, who invaded the Midwest on his first speaking trip, had verbally lambasted the national Democratic Administration.

"It is the opinion of the Farmers Holiday Association that a national political party expressing the desires of farmers and laborers be formed at once," the resolution said.

"To this end we ask that all leaders of progressive groups meet in conference at the earliest opportunity to lay the foundations for the building of a third party."

The holiday association offered the co-operation of its officers in formulating the third party conference with the provision, however, "that the holiday association itself shall not become a political party."

"Reds" Ordered Out.

A group of alleged Communists who sought approval of a committee report were charged with "betraying the Government" and ordered from a business meeting by Reno.

"You can't talk. You can't argue. Don't try to get the floor. I'm running this meeting. Sit down and shut up. And get out before we get really mad," Reno shouted.

Led by Fred Hoppe, of Richland, Nebr., whom Reno asserted was not a member of the holiday association, the group had sought to win approval of a report on the Federal emergency relief conference of the united committee for action held at Sioux Falls, S. D., March 25.

Ship Board Urges New Coast Rates

Report Would Abolish All Present Schedules.

By the Associated Press.

The Shipping Board today released a report by Manuel de Quevedo, chief examiner of the regulations division, which recommended condemnation of all intercoastal rates for the purpose of starting afresh by establishment of uniform charges by all those engaged in this important trade.

The report cited the chaotic condition which has persisted in the intercoastal and gulf intercoastal trade, in which 200 ships are employed, and warned that although 60 lines were named as respondents in the action, numerous other carriers are subject to the same regulations. These latter, the report said, had not filed tariffs with the board and were subject to heavy fines.

The report established two rules of prime importance. One was a definition of "through rates" as opposed to "terminal rates," and the other was that the "amount of the rate can not be measured by the depth of the water."

today si an almost legendary figure —"Scotty of Death Valley."

For a time he prospected with Scotty in Death Valley, which straddles the Nevada-California line. Recently, while traveling across the country, Baker and Senator Pittman visited the old millionaire-miner at his castle in the desert.

Baker left the mining fields for the field of politics when his brother, Cleve, ran for attorney general of Nevada. He worked for his brother's election, and afterward himself took an office—that of warden of the Nevada State Penitentiary at Carson City. In this post he was the first prison official to adopt the honor system among convicts.

Inthe campaign of 1912 he came East to work for the election of Woodrow Wilson.

Following Wilson's inauguration, Baker became secretary to George T. Marye, who had been named Ambassador to Russia. His family had know Marye in California.

Baker returned from Russia in 1916 and the following year was appointed Director of the Mint by President Wilson. This, a six-year appointment, carried over to the Harding Administration.

Wedded Mrs. Vanderbilt.

While he was directing the making of Uncle Sam's coins, Baker married Mrs. Margaret Emerson Vanderbilt, daughter of the Baltimore drug manufacturer and widow of Alfred Vanderbilt, who went down on the Lusitania.

They had one child, Gloria, who is now 15.

Following their divorce in Reno, Mr. Baker married Mrs. Delphine Dodge Cromwell. She had been divorced from ames H. R. Cromwell, now the husband of Doris Duke.

Mrs. Baker, nationally known as a pilot of speed boats, is also an accomplished musician. It was to further improve her art at the piano that she went to London. Mr. Baker went to New York to wish her bon voyage.

Rites Tomorrow.

Former Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, a close friend of Mr. Baker, said last night that a cablegram had been sent to Mrs. Baker. Attempts also were being made, he said, to get her by telephone.

With Mr. Baker when he died were Mr. and Mrs. Palmer and a brother, George W. Baker, of San Francisco, and his wife.

Mr. Palmer said that Baker, well known as a raconteur, was in a gay mood until he became unconscious.

Funeral services will be held at the home on Foxhall road tomorrow at 5 p. m., and will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. Ze. Barney Phillips, chaplain of the Senate. Burial will be in Nevada.

Surviving Mr. Baker besidse his brother George are his mother, another brother, Harry, and a sister, Mrs. John Grissim, all of San Francisco.

Dust Area Fights Diseases of Lungs

7 Dead, Many Stricken in Oklahoma Strip.

By the Associated Press.

Beaver, Okla., April 28.—Physicians fought to check the spread of respiratory illnesses in the Southwest drought region today, with dust blamed by Red Cross officials as a contributing cause to seven pneumonia deaths in a week.

"The present dust-laden air," said Dr. E. A. McGrew, of the Beaver Hospital, "is causing more and more infections of the respiratory tract and the more serious cases are surely the most fatal lung infections I have ever seen."

Three persons were dead and a dozen hospitalized here; another dozen were ill at other parts of the Oklahoma panhandle; two were dead in Seward County, Kans., and one at Walsh, Colo., as silt clouds blew fitfully over the area.

The death Wednesday of Murry Hargar, Texhoma, Okla., farmer, was also attributed to pneumonia induced by the dust.

Showers fell in Nebraska, Oklahoma, eastern Kansas and Missouri today, but missed the 18,000,000-acre dust bowl of western Kansas, eastern Colorado, eastern New Mexico, the Oklahoma and Texas panhandles. Dust flew at several points northeastward from Amarillo, Tex.

to replace the ancient hand equipment Martin had used so many years.

Originally this village was known as Santa Fe, but there was another town of the same name in Indiana and postal officials asked that the name be changed. The request, occurring during the Christmas season in the late nineteenth century, caused a local wit to suggest "Santa Claus," according to legend.

During his last illness, Martin was not forgotten by the children whose holiday he made joyous. When newspapers reported his illness hundreds of them wrote and begged him to get well.

"Those letters helped dad as much as anything when he showed so much improvement last week," his son, Paul, said.

Cannon Sees New Prohibition Laws

Bishop Says RepealDidNot Change Alcohol's Effect.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., April 28. — With the declaration that prohibition will be rewritten into the laws of Virginia and the Nation, Bishop James Cannon, jr., in an address here this afternoon called for organization and support of the dry cause to bring voters to the polls to wipe out State dispensaries. Bishop Cannon was preceded to the platform by the Rev. E. J. Richardson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Virginia. The Bishop remained seated during his address, explaining he was suffering from a recent injury to an arm.

Terming repeal a "foolish act of the people," Bishop Cannon said that none of the facts concerning alcohol had been repealed, nor has the effect of alcohol upon the moral, physical and spiritual qualities of the Nation been repealed.

Entrance Total In Spelling Bee Is Nearing 300

Week-End Brings Figure Now to 278; St. Mary's Pupils Enrolled.

Week-end entries in the National spelling bee, sponsored in Maryland and Virginia by The Washington Post, brought the number of schools entered to 278, and there is every indication that the total will pass 300.

Pupils in parochial schools in St. Mary's County have a dual purpose in studying spelling these days. They will take part in a contest among their own schools Thursday—and the two best spellers from each school will take part in The Post match in Margaret Brent High School, at Helen Saturday, at 7:30 p. m. The latest school to enter in this county is The Little Flower of Great Mills, enrolled by the Rev. H. J. Parker, S. J.

Some schools are enrolling in the contest, and announcing their champion spellers at the same time. Several have asked whether if, for any reason, their school winners can not take part in th ecounty match, other pupils may be substituted. This will be permitted and encouraged; each school should attempt to send the spellers it has been allotted to the county contest, and last-minute substitutions may be made.

The Post School at Fort Belvoir has been entered by Miss Earlyne Finney, principal, who also announced the winners of the school match, Alida Browne, seventh grade, and Ruth Health, sixth.

Mrs. Ruth W. Sessions has reported the following representatives for the Montgomery County match from Kensington: Albert Fox, Jessie Woodwell, Grace Steele and Mildred Jones.

Latest schools to enroll, with the name of the principal or teacher in charge, are:

Albermarle County: Red Hill High, Miss Gertrude Morrison; Old Dominion, Miss Eulah Smith.

Rappahannock: Woodville, Miss Lillie M. Johnson.

Shenandoah: Liberty Furance, Miss May E. Shipp.

Prince Georges: Cheltenham, Miss Sara Lee Collins.

Mrs. Frank P. Schrivener has accepted an invitation to call the words at the Prince Georges County match Friday at 7:30 p. m. Use of Marlboro High School for this match has been secured through the courtesy of Gardner Shugart, principal. Miss Maude Gibbons, of his staff, is in charge of arrangements.

Teachers who have not done so are asked to submit the names of their best spellers as certificates of merit will be sent them. The certificates will not be ready until after the county matches, but will be mailed then. All communications concerning the spelling bee should be addressed to Alice Fox Pitts, Spelling Bee Director, The Washington Post.

Whole U. S. Fleet Will Sail Under Sealed Orders Today

By the Associated Press.

San Pedro, Calif., April 28.—Virtually the full power of American defense at sea was prepared today for the most confidential fleet problem in United States naval history.

The fighting strength of the United States Fleet, with exception of units at the Panama Canal Zone and the training squadron on the East Coast, was under sealed orders.

With dawn tomorrow 153 ships of the Fleet will be under way, for six weeks of maneuvers, in an area extending from the Hawaiian Islands to Alaska and from Midway Island, 1,200 miles west of Honolulu, to the Pacific Coast.

The aerial power of the Fleet, 466 planes, is nearly 50 per cent greater than ever before sent into maneuvers.

The first carrier division of the Fleet, the big aircraft carriers Saratoga, Lexington, the New Ranger and the Langley, will move out of San Diego, together with the submarines, cruisers and destroyers and other vessels based there.

Out of San Pedro and Long Beach anchorages the big ships, dreadnaughts and heavy cruisers, will get under way.

Admiral Joseph Mason Reeves, commander-in-chief, has made public nothing about the maneuvers. His methods of operating the United States Fleet, demonstrated in the last year of his command, have placed heavier responsibilities upon officers and men for real work than those of any previous commander-in-chief.

Virginia Plans Route Linking MountainParks

Rep. Robertson Will Seek U. S. Funds for Project in Blue Ridge.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., April 28.—A new State scenic highway linking recreational facilities of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Augusta, Nelson and Amherst Counties was envisioned in a letter written by Representative A. Willis Robertson to State Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley, and received here today.

Representative Robertson advocated the immediate construction of a State highway joining Waynesboro to the Big Levels Game Sanctuary and Sherando Lake and Recreational Park in George Washington National Forest; across the Blue Ridge to Massies Mill, passing Crabtree Falls; then back across the mountain to the State fish hatchery at Montebello, meeting the Lee highway at Steele's Tavern. He also proposes improvement of the road from Massies Mill to U. S. Route No. 29, providing a direct road from Waynesboro to Lynchburg.

The Sherando Lake and Recreational Park project is expected to be completed by the Government late this fall, while arrangements have been practically completed by the State for the transfer of the Big Levels Game Sanctuary to the Federal Government. The National Parks Service has announced plans for enlarging the sanctuary into one of the largest preserves in the East.

New Park Planned.

Representative Robertson reveals in his letter that plans are under way to establish a national park at Crabtree Falls, long regarded as one of Virginia's outstanding beauty spots, but little known to tourists because of its inaccessibility.

In reference to means of financing this project, Representative Robertson wrote to Mr. Shirley:

"Knowing that in order for you to finance a project of this character it will be necessary for you to have the privilege of using Federal funds on roads not included in the Federal highway system, I have taken up with the President, with the Secretary of Agriculture and with the chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, the use in Virginia of Federal funds on State and secondary highways. I feel that the Bureau of Public Roads will be sympathetic.

Financing Explained.

"You, of course, are familiar with the change made by the Congress in 1934 in the Federal road act whereby Federal funds are not only made available for secondary roads, but which requires that each State expend not less than 25 per cent of State allocations for such purposes. Therefore, I feel that your commission would have no difficulty in securing the consent of the Bureau of Public Roads in the development of the loop I have described, since the highway would undoubtedly carry a heavy tourist travel, reduce the distance from Lynchburg to Waynesboro by some 20 miles, and would connect up three Federal and one State development projects. And you, of course, are aware of the need for sound public works projects in the mountain area that would be traversed by the road in question."

Frederick Issues Employment Data

Total of 2,366 Given Jobs Since 1933.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 28.—Temporary and regular employment for 2,566 persons—2,221 men and 345 women—has been furnished by the local re-employment bureau since its opening here September, 1933, it was announced yesterday by Charles N. Staley, director. The total registration is 5,216—4,668 men and 548 women. Approximately 1,638 have been employed on public work projects and 928 have been given work by private individuals or agencies.

Frederick County is one of three in the State maintaining its own branch, the other two being Washington and Montgomery. Other counties have re-employment services, but in combinations of counties. Bureaus are at Annapolis, Chestertown, Cumberland, Hyattsville, Salisbury and Towson.

The local national re-employment committee will meet in Winchester Hall Thursday. Oliver C. Short, Baltimore, State director, will attend.

City Weighs Offer To Refund Bonds

Martinsburg May Cancel Deal Already Made.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 28.—At a special session of the City Council, Wallace Holzman, of Widman, Holzman & Katz, Cincinnati, dealers in municipal bonds, purchasers of the $92,000 sewerage bonds elegible to be refunded on of after 1939, and a number of local bankers discussed the recent contract entered into by the city for the refunding of these bonds.

The firm offered to take over the 5 per cent bonds and reissue refunding bonds in the same amount bearing 4½ per cent. This would effect a saving to taxpayers of the city of $5,290. The council accepted the offer. Later the clearing house wrote the city it would be glad to take over the issue at 3½ per cent, effecting a total saving of about $10,000.

Holzman denied his firm had used improper influence in getting the council to consent to the deal and stated his firm would expect Martinsburg to stick to the contract. The council asked that the firm hold up action in preparation for refunding July 1, pending further consideration.

Boat Capsizes, 2 Are Drowned On Fishing Trip

Woman and Two Boys Also Perish in Week-End Accidents.

Nearby waters took their first victims of the season yesterday as two Washington men lost their lives when their fishing boat capsized on the Patuxent River near Benedict, Md.

The victims were Frederick H. Wassmann, jr., 39, of 7804 Morningside drive northwest, and T. Raymond Mason, 606 Maryland avenue southwest.

The accident occurred about 8:30 a. m. as the two men, accompanied by John F. Krause, 425 Seventh street southwest, were about to change the position of the boat near the middle of the channel. When the engine started, lurching the small craft forward, Krause was thrown overboard and the boat capsized. Wassmann was reported to have shouted "Every man for himself," as the trio started to swim for the Calvert County shore.

Krause reached shore in time to turn and see Wassmann and Mason going down. Stumbling to Hollands Point, a quarter-mile away, he obtained the help of a launch and began dragging the river where the men went down. The bodies were brought to the surface soon afterward.

Wassmann is survived by his wife, Mary Creel Wassmann, his 20-month-old child, Mary Anne; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Wassmann, and two sisters.

Mason leaves his wife, Lucy Mason; four children, Thomas, 14; William, 12; Melvin, 10, and Donald, 6. His father, Thomas Mason, and a brother, Edgar V. Mason, also survive.

A coroner's jury, headed by Dr. Page C. Jett and called by Justice of the Peace William W. Duke, of Prince Frederick, gave a verdict of accidental death.

Woman and Two Boys Drown at Front Royal

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal Va., April 28.—Mrs Granville Hockman, 21, and two boys, Bedford and Lloyd Cook, aged 10 and 12, of Riverton, were drowned in the Shenandoah River near Riverton at 5 p. m. today. The boat from which they were fishing struck a snag and overturned. Front Royal firemen and police are dragging the river for the bodies.

The husband of the drowned woman and their 4-year-old daughter, Dorothy, also were in the boat.

Mrs. Hockman was the daughter of Charles Shearer of Moorefield, W. Va., and the two boys were the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Cook.

Gold Paid for 66% of U. S. 1934 Exports

Devaluation of Dollar Facilitated Purchase of American Goods.

New York, April 28.—Last year, an unusually large proportion of the value of goods imported into the United States went to meet payments on invisible items such as foreign interest and dividend payments to the United States, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. As a result, funds supplied by imports for the purchase of American merchandise dropped to the lowest level of the depression.

This decrease was not offset by funds from other sources such as tourist expenditures and immigrant remittances. Tourist expenditures last year were only slightly above the depression's low while immigrant remittances were at the low. Consequently, only $782,000,000 were available for the purchase of American goods last year without recourse to gold as a means of payment. This compares with $1,675,000,000 in 1933, $1,521,000,000 in 1932 and with $5,106,000,000 in 1929.

The expansion of 27.3 per cent over 1933 in the value of merchandise exported from the United States in 1934 was thus entirely the result of heavy shipments of gold to this country. These shipments, including a small amount of silver and currency, were valued at $1,351,000,000. Gold shipments thus provided funds for nearly two-thirds of the $2,133,000,000 worth of merchandise exported from the United States.

The ability of foreign countries to send such a large sum of gold to the United States was due to a considerable extent to the devaluation of the dollar. Devalution reduced the quantity of gold which was necessary to provide the funds from gold used last year in the purchase of American merchandise. It is apparent, however, that the drain on the quantity of foreign gold was, at the same time, unusually heavy. The value of merchandise exported from the United States in 1934 was thus supported by a factor which can not be expected to function indefinitely.

Uplift Means To Be Weighed By Chamber

Commerce Body Will Consider Practical Restoration Plan.

Development of a practical program for the restoration of normal financial, industrial and trade activity will be the aim of American business leaders who attend the twenty-third annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, to be held in Washington, April 29 to May 2.

The meeting will put forward a business plan for overcoming obstacles still standing in the way of complete economic recovery. Adoption of a business program will follow three days of discussion of the larger problems of national policy which today confront both business and Government.

Much of the discussion will center around legislative proposals affecting business now pending in Congress. From this point of view the chamber meeting is of unusual timeliness as it will bring forth a cross-section of business judgment on controversial legislative measures. In announcing the program for the meeting Henry I. Harriman, president of the chamber, said today:

"This national gathering of business men will mark a further important step in formulating a national business position on outstanding economic policies. What business has done, what it is now doing and what it has yet to do to accomplish its larger purposes and fulfill its larger responsibilities will be reviewed. How Government and business can best proceed to advance the national interest, meet current problems and lay the basis for sustained, permanent recovery will be considered from a practical viewpoint by delegates representing all branches of American business."

Metal Demand Continues Firm

Lead Has a Further Advance of $1 a Ton; Tin Is Steady.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—A further advance of $1 a ton in lead reflected continued active demand by various consuming branches. Refusal of smelters to accept more orders for metal than their daily ore intake caused buyers to continue their inquiries throughout the week. Publication of March statistics showing a moderate increase in stocks had no apparent influence.

Domestic demand for copper tapered off somewhat due partly to slight seasonal contraction in buying by automobile manufacturers. Reported sales of Blue Eagle electrolytic by the code authority of 23,000 tons to April 25 were slightly below the rate of purchase in the corresponding period of February.

Tin prices advanced moderately during the first half of the week in reflection of fair demand for April-May shipments by the trade. However, the higher levels seemed to check demand and with quieter conditions prevailing, prices reacted slightly.

Following the recent activity, zinc was quieter but the undertone was steady with prices unchanged. Orders on smelters' books were said to have placed them in a comfortable position. Antimony remained quiet at unchanged prices.

Slight increases in steel mill activity reflected slow but steady gains in miscellaneous buying as well as a further moderate improvement in demand from automobile manufacturers. Activity of tin plate mills due to the large business of can manufacturers was an outstanding feature and demand for steel from agricultural implement makers is still noted. Prices were unchanged for both finished steel and pig iron.

Favorable U. S. Steel Statement Expected

New York, April 28 (AP).—Wall Street circles are looking for a relatively favorable first quarter statement by the United States Steel Corporation.

It is estimated that the profit from operations may run in excess of $11,000,000, which would be the second largest quarterly operating return since 1931. The report will be issued after the close of the market next Tuesday.

Japan First in Cotton Exports; Is Next to U. S. as Consumer

Mills Now Setting New High Records; Shipments Last Season Were Equivalent to 65 Per Cent of Cotton Used in Same Period.

New York, April 28.—The Japanese cotton mill industry has made rapid strides forward during the last few years, according to a report issued yesterday by the New York Cotton Exchange Service, and Japan now stands second only to the United States as a consumer of raw cotton. In the exportation of cotton goods, Japan is second to none, since her cloth exports now exceed those of Great Britain. The greater portion of the Japanese industry is devoted to manufacturing for export.

"The Japanese cotton textile industry continues to forge ahead, regardless of the depression, and Japanese mills have consumed 13.6 per cent more cotton during the first eight months of this season than during the corresponding period last season, setting a new high consumption record for Japan. With the exception of the United States, Japan is now the largest single cotton consuming country in the world. While the Japanese textile industry suffered some setback in the early years of the depression, it recovered rapidly through vigorous expansion of export markets.

"Consumption of all kinds of cotton during the first eight months of this season, that is, from August 1 through March 31, totaled 2,264,000 bales of 500 pounds each, as compared with 1,993,000 in the corresponding portion of last season, 1,772,000, two seasons ago; 1,693,000, three seasons ago, and 1,478,000, four seasons ago. Last season, Japanese mills used 3,040,000 bales of all kinds of cotton, as compared with a consumption in the same period of 5,700,000 bales in the United States, 2,659,000 in Great Britain and 1,535,000 in Germany. Japan is constantly adding to her spindleage and had 9,530,000 spindles in place on January 31 this year, with 120,000 in course of erection, as compared with 9,115,000 a year earlier. In 1913, Japan had only 2,300,000 spindles.

March Exports a Record.

"Recent reports from Japan have told of some slackening in export demand for yarn and cloth, but, despite this, cotton cloth exports during March were the largest in any month in the history of the Japanese industry. They totaled 273,000,000 square yards as compared with 227,000,000 in February, 223,000,000 in March last year, and 182,000,000 two years ago. During the first eight months of this season, Japan exported 1,803,000,000 square yards of cloth as compared with 1,471,000,000 during the corresponding portion of last season, and 1,515,000,000 two seasons ago.

"Japan is now the largest exporter of cotton cloth in the world, having forged ahead of Great Britain in the 1932-33 season, and is shipping cotton goods at the present time to all parts of the world, whereas, some years ago, her trade was almost entirely confined to the Orient. Last season, cloth exports from Japan were equivalent to about 65 per cent of the total amount of cotton consumed during the same period."

Less U. S. Cotton Used.

World consumption of American cotton registered a slight increase from February to March, according to the New York Cotton Exchange service, but the increase was less than the usual seasonal expectations, due almost entirely to the small number of working days in March this year. March consumption was at a season rate of 11,500,000 to 11,600,000 bales, or about the same as in February, but it was considerably lower than in March in any of the past three years. World spinners used 973,000 bales of the American staple during March as compared with 958,000 in February, 1,208,000 in March, last year; 1,201,000 two years ago; 1,171,000 three years ago, and 979,000 four years ago. During the first eight months of this season, that is, from August 1 through March 31, world mills consumed 7,683,000 bales of American cotton, the smallest total for any corresponding eight-month period, with the exception of that in the 1930-1931 season, in many seasons. August-March consumption was equal to 83.3 per cent of the average August-March total in the past seven seasons. The average full season consumption in the past seven seasons was 13,647,000 bales.

All the major divisions of the world cotton spinning industry used less American cpton in March this year than in the corresponding month last year, two years ago, and three years ago. Domestic mills used 470,000 bales of the American staple as compared with 530,000 in March last year, and 485,000 two years ago. British mills consumed 83,000 bales as against 114,000 last year, and 129,000 two years ago.

The stock of American cotton in all hands in the world on March 31 was the smallest for any corresponding date since 1930, aggregating 12,537,000 bales as compared with 14,902,000 at the end of March last year, 16,679,000 two years ago, 17,273,000 three years ago, and 12,735,000 four years ago. On farms and in transit in the United States, there were 1,156,000 bales as against 1,320,000 a year earlier, and 2,443,000 two years earlier. The stock in warehouses in the United States aggregated 7,751,000 bales as compared with 7,813,000 at the end of March last year, and 8,858,000 two years ago. American cotton afloat to and at ports of Europe and the Orient totaled 1,613,000 bales as against 2,750,000 a year earlier, and 2,873,000 two years earlier. Mills in the United States held 1,073,000 bales, comparing with holdings of 1,601,000 at the end of March last year, and 1,289,000 two years ago. Foreign mills held 944,000 bales as compared with 1,418,000 a year earlier, and 1,216,000 two years earlier.

Trade Displays A Strong Tone

Carloadings and Retail Sales Are Favorable Summer Indices.

By the Associated Press.

The nation's business, influenced last week by both spring and summer trade cycles, displayed an undertone of strength. Although some sections, notably the East, reported retarding influences which hampered the growth of a distinct trend in either direction, a number of analyses agreed that general business and industry moved forward.

Flying the flag of "prosperity peaks," the automobile industry produced 110,970 units last week, the highest week production since August of 1929. Dealers statements to manufacturers show a comparable condition in the retail field with the used car market declining as an adverse influence on new car sales.

Carloading reports for the week ended April 20 revealed advances in almost all parts of freight with the total up four per cent from the previous week. Such a wide gain was more than normally expected at this time of year. Bituminous coal production for the same week was 6,150,000 net tons compared with 5,522,000 net tons the previous week. Production of steel last week gained fractionally.

Most adverse development was the downturn during the week ended April 21 in Electric power production, which was 1.7 per cent above the same week of 1934, but well below the total of the previous week.

Vestrymen Are Named By Church at Oakley

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., April 28.—At a recent meeting of the congregation of All Saints' P. E. Church at Oakley, of which the Rev. Jesse M. Woodrow is rector, the following were elected as vestrymen:

Dr. Walter B. Dent, senior warden; John Francis Dent, junior warden; Trueman Slingluff, Lock Holmes, Harry Fries and Joseph Crewe.

Miss Wilson Heads G. O. P. Club.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 28.—Miss Miriam Wilson was elected president of the Harrison County Young Women's Republican Club at a meeting in the Waldo Hotel Monday night. Other officers are Miss Kathryn McAndrew, vice president; Miss Violet Knight, secretary-treasurer. The executive committee includes Miss Margaret McKinley, Miss Mary McAndrew, Mrs. Madeline Pierce, Mrs. Lois Dillmore and Mrs. Marion Bartlett.

Week's Dividend Record.

New York, April 28 (AP).—The dividend record for last week discloses 19 favorable actions against 3 that were unfavorable, according to the compilation of Standard Statistics Co.

In the previous week there were 11 favorable and 6 unfavorable announcements.

Bank Clearings Register Drop For 3d Week

New York, April 28.—Bank clearings were again reduced, the loss being due mainly to the decline at New York and to the smaller amounts reported at other large centers. The total for the 22 leading cities in the United States for the week ended Wednesday, April 24, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $4,658,605,000, against $4,989,798,000 for the same week of last year, a reduction of 6.6 per cent.

This contrasted with a decline of 11.6 per cent in the previous week. At New York City clearings were $3,023,191,000, that amount being smaller by 12.1 per cent than that reported last year, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York of $1,635,414,000 was only 4.8 per cent higher.

At a number of important cities outside of New York, clearings continued substantially larger than they were a year ago. This was especially true at Detroit, Minneapolis, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas and Seattle. They were fair gains also at Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco and Portland. Washington, D. C., reported a gain of 21 per cent.

The total this week, the fourth of the month, when clearings generally are below those of the earlier weeks, showed a decline from the preceding week of $662,598,000, whereas a year ago the reduction for the same two weeks was much larger, amounting to $1,032,141,000.

Clearings in April this year compare quite favorably with the amounts reported for each month back to July, whereas for April of last year the total reported was exceptionally heavy and was in excess of any month back to January, 1932.

Austria Cashes in On Wales' Visit

Winter Resorts Report 30 Per Cent Increase.

Vienna (U.P.).—Austria is "cashing in" on the recent visit of the Prince of Wales.

Latest reports from the winter resorts reveal that compared with a year ago the number of foreign visitors to Austria has increased by more than 30 per cent.

In Tyrol the increase in February of this year compared to the same month in 1934 was 49.4 per cent, while Salzburg showed a 37.5 per cent jump.

This means more money was put into circulation in Austria, and through these invisible assets Austria will come a step nearer equalizing her international trade balance which has been unfavorable for years.

There was a mad international rush to Austria this winter soon after the Prince of Wales announced his intention of spending a fortnight in Kitzbuehel and several days in Vienna. His visit has been worth hundreds of thousands of dollars to the Austria tourist industry.

Curiously enough Frenchmen led the list of new visitors. Their number increased 97.4 per cent, which was only slightly more than the Dutch with 89.1 per cent. The English ran a good third with 78.4 per cent increase. There were greater numbers of Americans, Italians and even Germans, although political relations between the two countries are still poor.

Yukon-Alaska Boundary.

Ottawa, April 28.—As an aid in the effective enforcement of customs, immigration, and other regulations, the Dominion Government has reserved from sale a strip of land 60 feet wide along the Canadian side of the Yukon-Alaska section of the International Boundary. On the Alaska side of the boundary, the United States Government has reserved a strip of the same width through its public lands. The Yukon-Alaska boundary is 749 miles long.

Cigarette Stub Mars Aged Tree.

Sandusky, Ohio (U.P.).—A 100-year-old catalpa tree in a park here was ruined when a carelessly thrown cigarette stub started a fire in a crevice of its trunk. It was necessary to chop down the tree, a landmark.

Age-Old Effort of Man to Make Diamonds Has Ended in Failure

Recent London Report Recalls Attempts to Create the Gems.

By the United Press.

New York.—Down through the ages alchemists and scientists have sought to manufacture diamonds and gold. These efforts never have been successful commercially. A recent report from London that a new method of making diamonds had been discovered, recalled to old-time diamond men here the long list of attempts to create the gems artificially.

The first to attempt the manufacture of diamonds were the alchemists of the Middle Ages who labored tirelessly for centuries. It was believed in their day that a word might be discovered of such potency that its mere repetition would create diamonds, and also transform lead into gold. With the development of chemistry the ancient problem was attacked more scientifically.

One of the most elaborate attempts was made by Sir William Crookes, who exploded cordite in closed steel cylinders under a pressure of 8,000 atmospheres at a temperature of 7,000 degrees Fahrenheit. He thus obtained tiny crystals which he thought were diamonds, and which had some of the properties of the natural stone, but were not of the slightest commercial value.

Another elaborate attempt was made by Sir Charles Parsons who subjected carbon to a pressure of 15,000 atmospheres, but without making diamonds. Moissan, the French scientist, carried on similar experiments with the same disappointing results.

Two German scientists, Dr. von Hasslinger and Wolf, after years of labor, announced that they had produced diamonds by crystallizing magnesium silicate, but the process has been forgotten. A French engineer, Guyot de Boismeu, attacked the problem electrically and believed for a time he had made a diamond nearly one-eighth of an inch in size, but failed to develop any practical method. A similar futile announcement was made recently by a professor at Columbia University.

Exhaustive tests made in German universities show that while microscopic crystals resembling diamonds may be made at great expense, there is no proof that real diamonds ever have been made, or that they ever will be made. The tiny diamondlike crystals thus formed never have the beauty of the diamond and only resemble it in hardness. The only possible use for such so-called diamonds is to crush them to form diamond dust to be used for abrasive purposes, and diamonds of this kind are plentiful and cheap.

Despite the countless efforts to change the baser metals into gold and to transform carbon into diamonds, gold remains gold and diamonds still are diamonds.

Grandma's Frivolities Usurped By Easter Fashion Designers

Dark Taffeta Frocks With Big Sleeves and Full Skirts Popular.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 28.—Gold flower boutonnieres, shimmering glass belts and scarfs and gay flower-trimmed bonnets accent the chic Easter fashions which the smartest women in Europe have chosen for the day.

The costumes designed to appear in candle-lit cathedrals and flower-perfumed churches have borrowed many a frivolity from grandmother's day to make the most feminine clothes which women have worn in years.

Rustling dark taffeta frocks with big sleeves and rather full skirts—sometimes even worn over petticoats—neat little suits with carnation or cornflower boutonnieres and dark ensembles with crisp white accessories which recall the days "before the war" will appear on the three-bordered paths of the Champs Elysees and the Bois de Boulogne. Their colors are often sober—black, navy blue or brown—but every one is marked by some striking accessory which chants an Easter fashion carol of "femininity."

Cameos clip the necklines of dark taffeta frocks, great square mother of pearl buttons fasten coats, garlands of white organdie poppies encircle the throats of black dresses and gold flower clips and earrings centered with jade or coral seeds accent new ensembles.

Trim suits with a wide variety of jackets—bellhop, swagger, Norfolk or double-breasted—and crisp organdie or taffeta blouses are a favorite Easter costume. So are ensembles combining a frock with a five-eighth or three-quarter length coat, while a number of smart Parisians have chosen printed frocks topped by dark coats.

This year's Easter bonnet has most of its fashion news in front. Scores of new straws have brims which jut out almost like a visor over the face and are reduced to almost nothing behind. Others perch on the back of the head like a tiny bonnet brimmed with a little wreath of flowers and finished with a veil falling over the face. Gay flower toques covered entirely with small bright blossoms and broad brimmed chapeaux with a cluster of flowers on the crown will also be seen.

Shoes seem to have taken a tip from hats for a few of the newest models are designed to cover the foot entirely in front but leave the back open except for a strap or two encircling the heel. Gloves, which will add the final touch to Easter costumes are often short and some of them button once on the back of the hand.

Here are some of the smartest costumes which will be seen around flower decked tables in smart restaurants and in boxes at the races. One chic American has ordered a dark blue wool frock with a star shaped white linen collar cut out in stars to reveal the frock beneath and a belt clasped with a white patent leather treble clef. Another has a green wool frock finished with isinglass buttons and belt topped by a darker green three-quarter length wool coat and hat, while a French woman has chosen a brown crepe frock, brown shaved lamb cape, brown faille beret jutting out over the face and gold flower earrings and clip centered with jade bead seeds.

Wood Largely Used as Fuel

Ottawa, April 28.—The use of wood for fuel continues to be one of its major uses in Canada, according to figures issued by the Forest Service, Department of the Interior. In the latest edition of their publication, "Forest Facts," the annual consumption of wood for this purpose in the Dominion is estimated at somewhat more than 900,000,000 cubic feet out of a total consumption of wood of over 2,800,000,000 cubic feet. During the last few years, for economic reason, this quantity has tended to increase.

Character in Bottles

AN order for milk animates all the organized facilities of the corporate milkman.
It also defines his many responsibilities.
Responsibility for maintaining an adequate supply.
Responsibility for the public health.
Responsibility for timely and regular delivery.
It is in this trinity of obligations that the milkman finds his challenge and his opportunity.
How well he meets the decisive problems peculiar to his business determines whether he shall fail or prosper.
For it is only by the distinctions of quality in product and service that he may hope to win public good will in sustaining degree.
To say "milk is milk" is not enough for him.
As every milkman worthy of his vitamins well knows, milk must be milk plus the ingredients which give a man character and standing in the judgment of his home folks.

Penalizing Efficiency.

In developing his theory of export planning, Chester C. Davis, administrator of the AAA, has brought forth a very appealing argument. "Agriculture's share of our total exports," he says, "should be increased, not lessened." That is sound reasoning. Congress has repeatedly tried to give the farmer advantages equal to those of industry, but with very meager success.

From the broad viewpoint of national economy, it is much more important to retain foreign markets for our cotton than it is to extend outlets abroad for automobiles. Mr. Davis correctly points out that if farmers are able to dispose of their cotton in Europe and Asia they will have more purchasing power to buy the products of domestic industry. But the trend is not moving in that direction. Manufacturers are steadily increasing their foreign sales, while the volume of agricultural exports is rapidly falling.

The AAA may well be alarmed over this situation. It does not follow, however, that the trend of our export trade can be reversed for the benefit of the farmer by the sort of planning Mr. Davis proposes. Importers in other countries can not be induced to buy American cotton by denying them the privilege of buying American automobiles. Cotton produced under the AAA program is at a disadvantage in the foreign market because its price has been raised above the level of competing fibers from India, Egypt and Brazil. So long as that price disparity continues, it is absurd to suppose that cotton farmers could realize any lasting benefits from the curtailment of industrial exports.

Motor cars manufactured in the United States are in demand in many parts of the world because the efficiency of this industry enables it to produce good machines at low costs. Should an industry be penalized for its efficiency? If our cotton farmers are losing their ability to compete with growers in other lands because of obsolete production methods, artificial prices and crop restrictions, it would be a grave economic injustice to reward them at the expense of more advanced industries.

Instead of trying to hold progressive enterprises back, the AAA might far better consider ways and means of relieving cotton of the handicap that has been imposed on it by short-sighted planners. To devise a straitjacket for the motor industry would be an entirely negative move. With more effective results the AAA might foster the new cotton picking machine which is said to reduce costs and make production profitable at lower prices. The country would soon be in a pitiful state if each economic group plotted its "recovery" course so as to cut off gains already made by other more efficient industries.

Compromise For Mooney?

The California Assembly evinced willingness last week to compromise with Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings to resolve "a fixed and contentious problem." Apparently the legislative body has despaired of a final determination of these extremely controversial cases in the courts. It is ready to resolve the doubt in favor of the convicted men simply to be rid of a perennial issue that has become embarrassingly interwoven into California politics.

A good deal of significance may be attached to the fact that the resolution asking Gov. Merriam to commute the Mooney and Billings sentences from life imprisonment to the time they have already served, was sponsored by James F. Brennan, who was the prosecutor for San Francisco in the Billings case. Mr. Brennan's certainty as to the guilt of the two men convicted of bombing that tragic parade in 1916 has weakened to the point where he is willing to see them released. Likewise, it is significant that 51 out of 79 assemblymen in the State where the crime was committed share his view.

On the other hand, it is notable that this legislative body expressed no opinion as to the guilt of Mooney and Billings. It seems to have been chiefly interested in relieving California of a troublesome dilemma. Consequently, the resolution did not suggest a pardon, which would have cleared the convicted men of guilt, but asked that their punishment be terminated. That will not please Mooney, who would rather remain in prison than go free with anything less than complete vindication.

The one thing certain from this vote is that California is weary of the case. But it is not to be supposed that the attitude of the Assembly will bring a satisfactory termination. Indeed, it would be a very doubtful course for any legislature to favor release of prisoners because of a popular clamor against their incarceration. A more constructive move would be an investigation sponsored by the California Legislature to determine whether existing court procedure in that State lends itself to the perpetration of injustice.

Our Inadequate Navy.

Without even a record vote, so great was the majority, the House on Friday adopted a naval appropriation bill which calls for the expenditure of $457,805,261 during the coming fiscal year. The appropriation is almost $150,000,000 greater than that for the current year and comes close to doubling the money actually spent on the Navy during the year which ended last June 30. That tremendous increase in outlay, coupled with the fact that no other power is spending so much on its fleet, is today featuring many foreign headlines.

The debate on the measure showed that many thoughtful Congressmen were fully aware of the implications of their action. "We are not doing our part to promote peace," said Mr. Sisson. Whenever any country has created such a navy, asserted Mr. Carpenter, "it has invariably ended in a war." Passage of the bill, Mr. Kopplemann argued, will cause other nations to wonder "at our duplicity and falseness to the principles laid down by the President." During the discussions there have been many other observations of the same character, demonstrating appropriate uneasiness over the trend which our national policy is following in this respect. Why, then, has this bill aroused so little opposition?

Partly, of course, because what would once have been thought an enormous expenditure has lost so much of its fiscal significance in times when the Government is making no attempt to pay its way, but is squandering the national heritage with unparalleled profligacy. Half a billion for the Navy is scarcely noticed when ten times that sum is about to be poured out for relief.

But beyond that is the tragic fact that the Administration has no policy to offer which affords a better assurance of lasting peace than is furnished by a huge Navy. As former Secretary of State Stimson pointed out to the meeting of the Society of International Law, speaking on the same day as the House action, the United States still refuses to approve any continuous procedure of consultation with other nations in behalf of the preservation of world peace. In such a course, he thinks, lies "the only hope of preventing war or even successfully restricting it."

Nor is it only the attitude of isolation which demands a fleet which shall be able to protect our shores against any possible combination of enemies. We contribute little or nothing to such machinery as the world has created to try and prevent war. But we are also lacking in a policy calculated to keep us from being entangled in wars which others start, and in which we have no vital national interest. Under the present interpretation of "freedom of the seas" it is the simple duty of the Navy to acquire a strength which will protect our commerce against any conceivable alliance which might desire to interfere with it in time of war. This indicates not merely the two-power standard which Great Britain sought for many years to maintain but, to be logical, a four or even five power standard.

In the House debate on the naval bill Representative Maverick did the clearest thinking. He it was who offered a resolution defining the conditions of neutrality—its specific clauses are a secondary matter—as the necessary offset to the development of a Navy constructed for aggression rather than defense. In other words, Mr. Maverick sought to set up a definite policy of peace alternative to the present national drift toward war.

Until some such positive alternative is adopted by the Administration there will be nothing gained by deploring the size of our naval outlays. Indeed, it could forcefully be argued that the admirals are almost modest in their present enormous demands. For even the present expenditure does not adequately guarantee the security of a nation which tries simultaneously to be isolated, and to enforce its will in every quarter of the globe. To make that policy effective a Navy second to none is not enough. A fleet the equal of all others is theoretically called for.

A Bit Premature.

Voltaire's celebrated Dr. Pangloss was firmly persuaded that this was the best of all possible worlds. A close affinity between him and the chairman of the Senate District Committee has been recently disclosed. Speaking before the Northeast Citizens Associations, Senator King referred to Washington as the "best governed city in the United States." This community is freer from graft and scandal than other municipalities and taxes are light, he announced. To all of which Voltaire's answer to Pangloss may be fairly applied: "Il faut cultiver son jardin," which is to say, "There is yet much to be done and each man has his own particular assignment."

Washington is without doubt a "fine, modern" city. It is true, as the Senator points out, that it could use a few more schools and playgrounds, and that it might improve its transportation facilities. But almost any other given city could also do likewise to its advantage. If this were the sum of the District's shortcomings, the Senator's optimism would indeed be justified.

It so happens, however, that a sub-committee of the House District Committee is now in the very process of compiling a report on crime in Washington. Investigation during the past six months has suggested that the crime problem is far from having been reduced to its ultimate minimum. Certain far-reaching changes in the police and court organizations seem to be in order. The committee's recommendations can scarcely fail to recognize this.

Washington is not the best of all possible cities. Nor, of course, is it the worst. In painting his picture, Senator King gave prominence to the brighter tones. But all is not yet perfectly quiet along the Potomac. Until local crime is mopped up in accord with the committee's conclusions and until the traffic and accident situation can be brought under control, perhaps it would be more fitting to postpone any city-wide jubilee of rejoicing and self-congratulation.

Demoralizing Silver Money.

The Treasury has had remarkable success in "boosting" the price of silver, but it has failed dismally in its endeavor to curry favor with silver using countries. Moreover, our buying policy must be very disappointing to those monetary reformers who are looking forward to what they vaguely term "world remonetization" of silver.

We have demoralized the Chinese exchanges and forced the authorities to place restrictions upon silver exports, while it is rumored that Shanghai banks are refusing to redeem internal currency in silver. The net result of our experiment, so far as this great silver standard country is concerned, is to restrict the monetary use of silver and cause the government to consider changing to a managed currency.

Mexico, as the largest producer of silver, is not disposed to quarrel with a policy that has enriched her mine owners and added to the volume of her exports. Nevertheless, the latest advance in silver prices has created in that country a major currency crisis which has resulted in a temporary closing of banks and orders for the withdrawal of silver from circulation. All coin must be surrendered to the Bank of Mexico in exchange for paper issues, and exports of coin are forbidden. This summary action has been made necessary by the speculative hoarding of pesos for sale as bullion.

If prices are pushed still higher it may become profitable to melt silver rupees. Then India, another great silver using country, will find its monetary system upset by our pretense at playing the part of a "good neighbor."

The present hesitation of the Treasury in face of the confusion wrought by its policies is doubtless only momentary, as the law makes continued purchasing mandatory. It is a matter of guesswork as to what will happen when the $1.29 per ounce level is eventually reached. To prevent prices thus artificially raised from collapsing, however, it appears that the Treasury will have to continue to accumulate silver when offered.

Prof. Kemmerer, the well known monetary expert, may well ask: "What good is the accumulation of a lot of silver?" "We don't redeem our money with it," he says. "We don't settle international balances with it. We aren't on a bimetallic standard. There is no world interest in bimetallism." In short he concludes, with good reason, that the silver buying program of the Government is an "absurdity" and a "foolish waste of money."

If it had been the intention of Congress to discourage the use of silver as a monetary metal, it could not have hit upon a more effective course than that which is now being followed under the pretense that it is benefiting silver using nations.

Daylight Saving Time.

In the beautiful city of Stockholm it is not uncommon to arrange a tennis match or a sailboat race for an hour dedicated in other latitudes to moving pictures and similar twilight diversions. Because of its northern location, summer night does not fall on the city until 9 o'clock or later. What Nature has so conveniently arranged in Sweden is artificially effected in more southerly parts by the adoption of daylight saving time. Last night New Yorkers, for instance, lost one hour's sleep when the city moved its clocks ahead 60 minutes. Quite a number of other communities already have taken similar action or will soon follow suit.

This means of beating Father Time at his own game is popular in various parts of the country, particularly in urban areas. Farmers resent the practice because they still must pick market produce and tend live stock on the sun's schedule rather than man's. Their lives are appreciably inconvenienced by the shift. But for the man who lives by time clocks or whistles, the scheme has definite advantages. By simply sounding the whistle one hour earlier, he is able to finish his eight-hour stint one hour earlier. He is thus free to indulge in sports and other outdoor activities ordinarily denied him by the onrushing shades of night.

Washington in particular, with its legion of office workers, would benefit by daylight saving time during the summer months.

Facts And A Promise.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

At the same time that the final 5 per cent Federal pay cut is restored at an annual cost of $50,000,000 Uncle Sam finds that he has more people on his salary rolls than at any time in the last fifteen years. At the end of February the number reached 680,546, according to the Civil Service Commission, and the number is still growing. In February 5,549 were taken on. Since President Roosevelt took office the increase in jobholders is 117,059.

The first pledge in the Democratic national platform reads:

An immediate and drastic reduction of Government expenditures by abolishing useless commissions and offices, consolidating departments and bureaus and eliminating extravagance to accomplish a saving of not less than 25 per cent in the cost of Federal Government.

Thunder On The Right.

During the temporary absence of Mr. Elderman, The Post's cartoonist, a symposium of editorial reaction to current national and foreign affairs will be published from day to day in this space. The reprinted drawings will not necessarily represent our own viewpoint, but are selected as reflections of considered opinions on the passing scene. The editors of The Post wish to make full acknowledgment of the courtesy of their contemporaries in granting permission for this procedure.

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Abominable Nude!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wonder if any one can tell the aim of what is called "modern art"—which really ought to be called poisonous art. After seeing the exhibition at the Corcoran, one feels that they have passed through some chamber of horrors. Most of the pictures are absolutely hideous. And the nudes are especially awful. Even Paxton, whose pictures are usually so very beautiful, has painted a nude, of a girl, who has evidently just stepped out of a very hot bath, judging from the pinkness of her skin.

Blacksmiths seem to be the fashion. In the passing of the noble horse the smiths have lost their place in importance in every community and are to be used for decoration purposes. Some of the landscapes look as though some child had selected a tube of yellow, green and blue and smeared the canvas. What they are intended to represent nobody knows.

The present exhibition at the Corcoran offends in every way the sense of refinement, if you have any; the love of color, of form and also of modesty, for a grossly painted nude is an abomination. H. T.

Washington, April 14.

Government Homes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the most humane and worthy things that the Government could do for Washington would be to build hundreds of modest homes at reasonable distances to downtown to be sold through long-time payments to Government employes. Three thousand dollars should be the top price for same, and that amount with the element of contractor and real estate profit omitted, could build a satisfactory home, where construction was done on a large scale.

It seems as though every time any one tries to bring low cost homes to Washington underhand opposition prevents definite developments. This class of welfare is not charity. The home owners pay for all they get and the community benefits from the additional homes within it.

I hope when they commence spending this $4,000,000,000 of Government money they will use a small part of it in the interest of the small homes. Such money will return to Uncle Sam.

Note To An Artist.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will somebody please tell us provincial ones if there has been a hold-up somewhere along the national highway that was not reported in the papers? The Christian Science Monitor carries a cartoon captioned: "Not Altogether a One-Way Street." It depicts three trucks carrying loads marked Work Relief Outlay, FERA Costs and New Deal Spending, going from the direction of the U. S. Treasury. Going toward the U. S. Treasury is one truck bearing a bag of dollar signs and marked: Savings From Refunding of U. S. Liberty Loans.

For the cartoon to be thoroughly realistic, should there not be sketched a long, shadowy road winding down into the dim future, along which crawls a caravan of trucks bringing in the tax money filched from yet unborn generations to pay for the present spending orgy? ELIZABETH EMMETT.

On Word Origins.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A reprint on your editorial page of April 22 speaks of the efforts of the Nazis to maintain the purity of German speech by banning words of foreign origin.

This effort is by no means new, but was in full force when I was in Gottingen more than 40 years ago. Not only university professors, but teachers in the lower schools, urged their pupils to use the noble German language, and especially to avoid the triviality of French words.

I fear the Germans will continue to find difficulty in limiting their language to words of purely German origin, nor does it seem to me at all desirable, even from a patriotic viewpoint. The English language is the most hospitable in the world to words of foreign origin, yet no one has ever accused the English of being indifferent to the glories of their own national history. H. B. HASTINGS.

Washington, April 22.

"By Constant Hammering."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a subscriber of long standing to your paper, I read with interest in your issue of April 22 the editorial "Up to the States," suggesting now is not the time to press for a vote on the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill.

In this day when much is being said about economic and social security for the citizen, it does seem to me that something should be done about securing the citizen against death or injury from mob violence. In spite of the opposition of some Southern Senators to this bill, are we to sit supinely by and let the mob take the place of organized government?

All worthwhile reforms have been brought about by constant hammering away. Eventually there will be an aroused public conscience which will demand the passage of a Federal anti-lynching bill and no filibuster will be permitted to block it. If this bill is a reflection on the South it is because the lawless element in that section has been hiding too long behind the smoke screen of "the sanctity of the fireside."

All honor to Senators Costigan and Wagner! Let us get solidly behind them and force some action on this bill. No legislation before the Senate today is of more vital importance. Let our duly elected representatives measure up in full to the confidence and trust their constituents have placed in them for the supremacy of law and order in all sections of the land.

And From Chicago.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is with heartfelt pleasure and gratitude that I am moved to write this small expression of commendation and thanks to your paper, in acknowledgment for the valuable service conducted by Mr. Morgan Baker.

Not only has this service been prompt and helpful in response, but the courteous and gentlemanly assistance shown me, while in Washington, by this genial columnist, deserves special commendation, and was the means of securing my name as a subscriber to your great newspaper.

More power to The Post and the Federal Diary! I shall continue to boost both among the Government employes at the Sixth Corps Area, Chicago.

Employment Service Record

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The issue of The Post for April 16, 1935, carried a letter signed by Mr. Samuel Rosenfeld which made certain disparaging statements concerning the United States Employment Service.

For the information of the readers of The Post, the following record of accomplishments is cited:

The combined State employment services and the National Reemployment Service, together composing the United States Employment Service, received during the 18 months ended December 31, 1934, applications for employment from 14,545,110 different individuals. During this same time, members of the staffs of these offices held 24,894,406 interviews with these applicants. The number of positions filled by the service during these 18 months was 8,522,926. Of these 48.3 per cent was on Civil Works projects, 26.4 per cent on Public Works projects, 1.9 per cent in other forms of Government service, and 23.4 per cent in private employment.

Representatives of the offices made 1,301,812 visits to employers for the purpose of encouraging them to use the Public Employment Service. At the end of the year 6,526,871 individuals were still recorded as actively seeking employment.

The record of accomplishments of the District of Columbia Public Employment Center, the local office of the United States Employment Service for the City of Washington, is as follows:

During the 18-month period ending December 31, 1934, 89,619 individuals applied for employment, while 33,616 positions were filled. Of this total number of placements, 28.2 per cent was on civil works projects, 20.9 per cent on public works projects, and 50.9 per cent in other Government positions and private employment.

First commercial flight from California to Honolulu has been completed on schedule. The voyage, once so hazardous, was accomplished without special incident. Airlines may be in regular operation between America and the Far East before the year is out.

The Honolulu flight lacked the spectacular element of the air journeys over the Atlantic. But it is likely to have far more important consequences.

America has looked toward Europe since colonial days. Now this country is closer to the Orient than to the Occident. The voyage of the American Clipper is far more than a mere feat, because it establishes the first link in a commercial chain between the United States and Asia.

The Post Impressionist

Belgian Hares Of Fiction.

Post Office, Monday.

THE book-news reporter asked the publisher if there was anything doing. The publisher replied:

"E. Phillips Oppenheim is writing another novel."

"Oh, yeah?" jibed the reporter. "And there's an airplane going to fly over Washington tomorrow."

* * *

Well, if constant recurrence reduces the news-value of an event, that publisher's information is probably many miles on the minus side of news. But if literary fecundity is as much news as other kinds of fecundity, then a new novel by E. Phillips is news indeed.

* * *

On the whole, the Post-Impressionist thinks there is something to be said for the news-value—whatever may be the artistic importance—of mere literary mass-production per se.

* * *

In the 68 years of his life, Alexandre Dumas the Elder wrote an incredible number of volumes of fiction. Over 200, wasn't it? But he, more than half the time, was a syndicate. He was Alexandre Dumas plus Maquet, Lacroix, Bocage, Mallefille and Forentino.

Edward Phillips Oppenheim is 69. We have good reason to believe that he works alone. And he has already published 97 novels—not to mention 31 collections of short stories.

* * *

Only ten of those novels have not appeared in the United States. To be sure, a dozen or so were issued in England under other titles than those used for them in America—an annoying device: almost the sole thing about Mr. Oppenheim that makes enemies among American visitors to the British Isles. But, anyhow, 82 is an imposing figure in itself.

And, we are glad to report, Mr. Oppenheim's health and energy continue excellent.

* * *

Literary people of every taste have shared a taste for Dumas at his best: Thackeray, Lang, Stevenson, Howell's Hemingway. And so it should be.

A goodly lot of literary people whose own work represents a considerable variety of literary standards read Oppenheim, too. And certainly all non-literary people read him.

It's queer that so little is written about him.

He was educated at the Wyggeston Grammar School, in Leicester, England. He married an American, a Bostonian—has one child, a daughter, and a villa at Cannes on the Riviera. He likes yachting, shooting, golfing.

That's nearly all that's published concerning him.

Yet his first novel was issued when he was 21—which is to say in 1887. And his latest, "The Spy Paramount" (Little, Brown & Co., of course), is as lively, to use a well-weighed adjective, as was "A Maker of History." If, unlike the Post-Impressionist, you care as much for heroes who work for world peace as you hate villains who work for world war, you'll say it is as good as "The Great Secret."

Why, at one time Mr. Oppenheim wrote so fast that his sales suffered from self-competition! He had to invent another name for half of his writing personality—chose "Anthony Partridge." And we've been told that he gave it up solely because Partridge began to be more popular than Oppenheim.

* * *

He didn't have to write, either—the lucky dog! He was born to a rich leather business. He used to contribute "pieces" to the Nottingham newspaper.

* * *

We should like to tell you of our first meeting with this creator and master of the spy-novel. There is, unfortunately, a drawback: the meeting never occurred.

Yet we do believe that he got some of his technical color from first sources.

* * *

Away back in prewar days, when we were planning a trip to Europe, the editor of a magazine, whose assistant editor we then were, said to us:

"Of course, this is a vacation, and I don't want you to work while you're over there; but if you happen to run across Oppenheim on the Riviera, you might see whether he's doing anything in our line."

We didn't get to the Riviera that trip. Shortly before starting back home, however, we were introduced to a charming Czech gentleman who asked us to call on him—and on whom we called. Would we, he inquired, prefer a cigar to a cigarette? Himself, he was no judge of cigars, but his friend Mr. Oppenheim, the writer, was a cigar-connoisseur and pronounced these excellent. Let's say that our host's name was (which it wasn't) Adolf Syrovy. . . .

Some years later, were were again in Europe. That was during the war. A Czech named, let's say, Adolf Syrovy was arrested in Vienna as a French spy.

* * *

And now Mr. Oppenheim is approaching the century-mark with his novels and only the three-score-and-ten-mark with his years. And he looms again on the spyline of fiction.

We hope he shines there long. He shines brighter there than anywhere else.

After all, if he is not really like the elder Dumas, the elder Dumas was like Mr. Oppenheim.

The elder Dumas was the E. Phillips Oppenheim of literature.

Equity Alone Blocks Theater On Sundays

New York Governor Signs Bill As Broadway Cheers; Grace George Comes Back.

By Ralph E. Renaud.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

NEW YORK has finally flung her winter garments of repentance into the fires of spring and will henceforth allow the theaters to stage their shows on Sunday. Gov. Lehman has signed the bill and everything is set for Sabbath entertainment. But the joy of Broadway is somewhat tempered by the last-ditch stand of Equity, the actors' union, which is trying to sweep back the tide with whatever broom it can lay its hands on.

The new legislation is permissive rather than mandatory. However, no difficulty is anticipated from the board of aldermen here, and the city fathers are expected to pass an enabling ordinance at once. The situation is different with Equity, however. That active and militant organization bases its opposition on no moral grounds, but holds that the actor is entitled to his one day's rest a week. But as the Governor also approved a supplementary bill specifically guaranteeing every theatrical employe, including actors, 24 hours of consecutive rest in every seven days, it is difficult to understand the objection of Equity.

Nevertheless, Frank Gilmore, president of Equity, maintains his position. But he is willing to put the matter to a referendum vote of members. This, however, will take at least three months, which means that there will be no Sunday shows this summer. So the producers will not reap their golden harvest until next fall anyway.

In its fight against Sunday shows Equity was deserted by every ally of years past except the Lord's Day Alliance, and even these frowning gentlemen were not as vigorous as they might have been. Organized labor, represented by the stage hands, electricians and carpenters, formerly stood behind Equity, but they are now satisfied with the protection the Governor has given them. Producers, writers and a considerable percentage of the less prosperous actors all lined up in favor of the legislation.

• • • •

AS A MATTER of fact, there is already plenty of Sunday entertainment on Broadway. The moving picture houses have been unreeling their features every day of the week and Sunday has come to be their big opening day. Concerts were never forbidden and floor shows at the night clubs are just as jazzy on Sunday as on Wednesday. Only the legitimate houses were dark.

The producers have always maintained that was discrimination. Equity insists that Sunday shows are not necessarily profitable. It points to a recent Easter night performance in Atlantic City which took in $87 and cost $180. Easter comes only once a year, however, and the show probably wasn't much good anyway.

It is hard to convince the producer of a hit show, who has to pay his rent every day of the week, that he mustn't fill his theater on Sunday, as he easily could. The author doesn't object to getting an extra day's royalty, either. And for the actor under the new legislation it is exactly six of one and half a dozen of the other. He gets his play time whether or no. It is only the players in the burlesque and vaudeville fields who are out of luck. They don't qualify as actors under Gov. Lehman's New Deal.

• • • •

OLD TIMERS in the theater district are throwing up their hats over the come back of Grace George, whose new play, "Kind Lady," has the appearance of prosperity and long life. Miss George, of course, is the wife of William A. Brady, dean of the producers, and that adds warmth to the welcome of the well-wishers. Moreover, when she gets the right vehicle, there isn't a more competent comedienne on the American stage.

Miss George's career covers a long span in the memory books of first nighters. She was a star more than a quarter of a century ago, and her "Divorcons" was then high-water mark for that sort of thing, staccato, brilliant, all pink and white. Of late years she has not been so happy in her selections and has been rather chary of the footlights. Hollywood never appealed to her and she will leave no screen record, such as Billie Burke, one of her contemporary comediennes, is making.

The present play, fashioned by Edward Chodorov, from a story by Hugh Walpole, concerns a charitable woman who inadvertently takes a band of crooks into her home where they try to separate her from her friends and strip her of her fortune. It creates an atmosphere of subdued horror and agonizing suspense, which does not seem exactly in Miss George's line, but which she has the technical equipment to handle. The star, who has been ill for the past two years, took the play as a tonic. It worked like a charm.

THE Tar Baby is taking another squint at the world and can scarcely keep in bed for happy laughter. Old Sam Langford, pugilism's black gorilla, the toughest egg who ever pulled on a set of gloves and pushed the big boys into the rosin, has been successfully operated on for blindness. Up at the Neurological Hospital on Welfare Island, they say the Tar Baby is going to retrieve about 50 per cent normal vision in his one remaining eye.

Sam Langford was too careless ever to be an American champion. He would take on anybody and rough it around in his own class or out. The Boston Tar Baby was really a lightweight, but he would meet the heavies with a grin and pound them' something terrible. The late W. O. McGeehan thought he was the best fighting machine in the ring. Sam wasn't long on brains or discretion, but his wallop was a wow and floored some of the proudest. If Sam could still fight he wouldn't think twice about mussing it up with Primo Carnera.

Naturally, with that carefree attitude toward the ring, he absorbed some fierce punishment. Long ago he lost one eye completely. But he kept on fighting just the same. He thinks Sam McVey did more to close his other eye than anybody else, but holds Joe Jeannette the hardest hitter of his own race and Stanley Ketchel the most murderous of the whites. "My, my," says Sam at the hospital, reaching for a chew of tobacco. "Wouldn' that white boy clean up today!"

Sam was still fighting when he couldn't see the stool in his own corner or make out the referee. He won the championship of Mexico from Kid Savage when he couldn't distinguish his opponent two feet away.

"I know how they come in," explains Sam. "I kin guess pretty good what they're going to do. I don' mind takin' a few to git in one. And so, after 'bout a round with Kid Savage I went home."

"What do you mean—you went home?"

"Well, the Kid forgot to duck an' I was heavyweight champeen of Mexico."

THERE is is something pathetic in being burdened with a great name, as all history records. The latest attempt to escape one is being made in this man's town by Mary Adeline Prentice, 27-year-old granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller. Her mother is Alta Rockefeller, the oil king's only living daughter.

For the last six months Miss Prentice has reveled in being an obscure assistant in an uptown doctor's office. She is what is usually called a receptionist and helps out any way she can. A few weeks ago the newspapers got after her because she happens to be human interest copy, but she was pretty cagey and managed to dodge them rather successfully. When there are reporters on your trail, though, it's best to give up hope, and Miss Prentice has at last grudgingly succumbed to an interview.

She doesn't say much except to admit that her mother was haunted by the Rockefeller name. The granddaughter hates publicity more than anything in the world, and apparently imbibed a longing for privacy with her first meals. Not very originally, but rather touchingly, her first message to the public sums up to "Let me alone! I want to live my own life!"

Visitors to New York complain of the staggering prices and how much it costs to have a good time. Still, the home bodies insist there is a lot of free fun to be had around these parts, if you know how to look for it. The fire department, for instance, reports that there were 13,000 false alarms turned in last year. Viewing the fire engines is a pleasure any one can enjoy without spending a cent—if he can beat it away from the alarm box fast enough.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

The New Era.

"I SEE by the papers," said Pete, the taxicab driver, "that Mrs. Roosevelt is complaining because some of us won't admit it's a new era. We may as well quit being stubborn, she says, and accept it and the sooner we do that the better off we will all be.

BARGERON.

"Well, I likes to be accommodating to the ladies and if it will make Mrs. Roosevelt feel any better I'll admit it's a new era. I don't like to quibble about such things. I told my wife only this morning, I says to her, why do you always want to quibble about something you know nothing about. That's my philosophy. Gosh, I have enough worries trying to make a living with this cab than to be worrying about what sort of an era this is. Some people get lotsa kick out of words, you know. As for myself I don't particularly worry about them, but now there's Mrs. Roosevelt, if she can have a good time going around the country bawling people out because they won't call it the new era, well I says, she's got a perfect right to do it.

• • • •

"How's that? Watch where I'm going? Let me tell you something, Mister. I never have no accidents. I was driving a taxi long before the depression. I'm not just one of these depression drivers.

"As I was saying about the new era, as I was saying, Mrs. Roosevelt's got a perfect right to call it that. I got more to do than quarrel with her about it. If she was to get into my cab I'd agree with her right off that it was a new era. Yes, sir, that's me. I tris to be congenial, genial.

"But you know the truth is I don't see nothing new about it. I guess lotsa people would think I've got no thoughts on it. But I have. I just don't believe in arguing about it, that's all. I guess I can think so long as I don't say nothing about it.

• • • •

"If everybody would just think and not say nothing about it, this would be a much better country to live in. Isn't that what you say? When people think and talk, too, then there's bound to be misunderstandings arise.

"There's Senator — what's that Senator's name from Montana? Oh, yes, Senator Wheeler. Now I hear lotsa people say about how radical he is. We taxi fellows hear lotsa things, you know. Yeah, people get into cabs and think we are deaf. They just go on talking as if they was alone. Believe me, there's lots I could tell if I wanted to.

"Well, I've heard the manys of them talk about how radical Senator Wheeler is, about how he wants to take the money away from them that's have it and give it to them that's don't.

• • • •

"Well, I don't say nothing because I figure it's none of my business. But now what's radical about him? Now I ask you? He hasn't taken any money away from nobody. Here's what he's done. I'll tell you. He's kept on until he's got the price of silver boosted, that's what he's done. Do you own any silver mines? Naw, of course, you don't. Neither do I.

"Who do you suppose do own the silver mines? The same fellows who own the gold mines and all the other mines, that's who owns them. Only the other day a bunch of fellows got into my cab and I heard them talking about how much they'd cleaned up in silver. They said they thought Senator Wheeler was a misunderstood man, that's what they said. They said he wasn't radical a tall. They said he was a regular Tory and they wished he could be seen in the right light.

"I asked a fellow in here one day how giving more money to the silver mine owners helped us fellows and he said, well, the money dribbled down. But I read somewhere once that that's the old Hamiltonian philosophy, or whatever you call it. Anyway, I don't see where it makes the Senator a radical, do you?

"You know, come to think of it, maybe that's where Mrs. Roosevelt makes her mistake. You know she uses so many words that it's but natural she'd make a mistake some time. Maybe instead of its being the new era she means to say it's the new commodity.

"Well, here's where you get out."

Brazil Is Asked To Burn Coffee

New York, April 28.—A cable received from Brazil by the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange reads as follows:

"The Brazilian Rural Society has presented the following measures to the coffee producers congress.

"(1) Buy in the interior 4,000,000 bags of the future crop at free price of 70 milreis per bag for type four.

"(2) Twenty per cent sacrifice quota without payment for the following purposes: (a) The maintenance of market free prices of 60 milreis per bag for type Rio 7, and 80 milreis for type Santos 4. (b) Prompt reduction of taxes—the buyers to have the right to the difference in taxes on coffee despatched 30 days prior to said reduction. (c) Free exchange of coffee export bills."

Coffee mentioned in first and second items to be incinerated."

Another cable said:

"Tools Of Tomorrow," The Story Of What We've Got In Technical Advance, And Why We Haven't More.

By Theodore Hall.

THE scientific technicians, the men who mix new alloys and invent multi-automatic machines and go to bed with a slide-rule under their pillows, are pretty riled—whenever they think outside their speciality—with the state of the world.

"What's the matter with the rest of the outfit?" they ask disgustedly. "We tell them how to raise all kinds of food, and a lot of people start eating garbage. We design a long-range plane for an air line, and they start wondering if they can drop bombs on Tokyo. We find some mineral we need in Africa, and Congress slaps a duty on it to protect a little hole-in-the-ground mine in Colorado. We figure out a cheap and easy way to make something, and they all jump on us for causing unemployment. Wasn't that what they wanted us to do—save labor?"

Thus Jonathan Norton Leonard puts into their mouths the theme-song of his direct and illuminating book on men and machines—"Tools of Tomorrow" (Viking Press, $3). Elsewhere in the pages it goes into one sentence: "The collective mind of humanity has not developed as fast as applied science." Which, it seems, is the trouble with the world. Well, one of them.

• • • •

PRINCIPALLY, Mr. Leonard is concerned with telling us the hugely interesting story of power, metals and machines, especially in forecast. We're never going to run out of power—a comforting thought if you're given to worrying about the year 5000. That troubling-making imp, petroleum, seems the first to vanish. But in 1927 the Geological Survey said the American reserves would last eight years, and here we are with an harassed control board trying to keep our supply from flooding the market. The latest estimate of the world reserve gives us 35 years. As to coal, the world reserve divided by the world's peak consumption gives us the cheery quotient of 6,000 years in which to smell coal smoke. And then you add water-power, tides, earth's internal heat, sun, wind, ocean water and vegetable alcohol—each of which has scarcely been touched—and you see we're doing nicely, thank you. And even all that is not to mention the still-legendary split atom.

No are we at all likely to run short on metals. Take, as an example of possible supply, the fact that all the good red dirt of Virginia and the Carolinas is actually iron ore of a quality far richer than the usual ores from which we get copper. If iron ever rose near copper's price, we would begin smelting right over in Fairfax County. With the fine electrical instruments of geophysical prospecting (which Mr. Leonard ably explains) we can find out what metals are within 20,000 feet of the surface anywhere on the earth. Used in the Rand gold fields of South Africa, the instruments have already found a deposit which may possibly increase the world's gold production by 25 per cent—"which," remarks Mr. Leonard, "any financier will admit is a major event in economics." And as if all that weren't a rosy enough prospect, the metallurgists are compounding brand-new metals every week—actually outdoing Nature at her own game.

So much for the "food for mechanical slaves," as Mr. Leonard puts it, and the "flesh and bones of machines."

As for the machines themselves, he takes us in a skimming but enlightening survey from drop-forging to television. What we possess, in our technical proficiency, is shown by the die-caster—an age-old process speeded up by automaticity until but two of these machines (machines twice as big as a grand piano and costing $5,000 each) can work at but half time and still turn out all the carburetor bowls or radiator caps for the entire automobile industry of the world.

Which sounds, as you'll note, very like the preachments of our old friends (not dead yet, says Howard Scott), the Technocrats. A section of thought which Mr. Leonard describes by one word—"silly."

For it does no good to vaunt, alone and singly, our specialized prowess. At best it is an indirect example—look again at the second paragraph here today—of some men, somewhere in society, doing their job well. But time and again, always apologizing for bringing in economics, Mr. Leonard has to look over the fence from the technical field. The die-caster and iconoscope tube used in television, perfected by their inventors as a professional feat, have social effects—they reduce a pay-envelope to a will-o'-the-wisp, and put a blank stare on the employment manager's face.

And that is the crux. "Technological unemployment"—that cool phrase which stands for the decidedly human plight of the glass-blowers who are supplanted by a machine which will form I don't know how many thousands glass-bulbs an hour—is here to stay. It is no evil genius, says Mr. Leonard, no "snake in Eden." It is "merely a proof that the technicians have done well the job which society asked them to do; they were told to reduce the amount of human effort required to produce a given amount of desirable goods; they have done so." And he adds, rather wishfully, "the result should be that human beings need work less for what they get."

Well, one school of thought says the antiquated glass-blowers should be supported by—i. e., receive the profits of—the very machine which ousted them. That represents complete state socialism. Another school, harder-eyed, more observant, notes that the glass-blowers had nothing to do with the design and utilization of the machine, that it came from a more technical type of human being, and that it falls upon the hand-workers with the same crushing unavoidability of some pre-historic climatic change upon the doomed dinosaurs.

Mr. Leonard inclines to the latter view—perhaps more cruel in the short run, but infinitely kinder in the long. The machine is not our master, but it influences us as drastically as any force in nature. No Canute can stop the mechanical tide from rising. We must, individually and socially, become more adept, various, variable, cooperative (not conformative) and technically skillful—in short, brainier. That point is behind Mr. Leonard's flat statement: "Only artificial restrictions enforced by Government will insure to incompetent men a permanent place in industry."

And when we add to our dubious management of that problem, the incalculable drag of political and financial vested interests upon science's efforts to give a minimum standard of comfort and physical security to something more than a slim fraction of our people, we see pretty clearly why the technicians cry out: "What's the matter with the rest of the outfit?"

Railroad Revenues Register Decline

New York, April 28 (AP).—Railroad statements for March, published to date, compared rather unfavorably with the returns for the same month last year. The first 41 carriers to report had net operating income totaling about $19,600,000 against $27,855,000 in March, 1934.

Gross revenues were approximately $136,405,000 against $141,900,000 last year. In both gross and net the figures showed substantial gains over the comparable returns for March, 1933.

Busman's Holiday

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

THE new Webster's Dictionary defines the phrase quite accurately as "A holiday spent in following or observing the practice of one's usual occupation."

Now who do you suppose first used this well-known expression? I can not find it in Bartlett, or in Hoyt, or in the colossal new "Home Book of Quotations," by Burton E. Stevenson.

At some time a driver of an omnibus must have used his day off by taking a journey in another bus; but who first used the expression to cover all similar cases?

• • • •

However this may be, what I think is the most remarkable instance of the kind I ever heard of, comes to me in an interesting letter from my friend Henry Tetlow, of Philadelphia. Mr. Tetlow had been visiting in London his friend and college classmate Hudson R. Hawley, known to all newspapermen and to thousands of others as "Boz" Hawley. He writes me,

And that reminds me of the superlative or farthest south in busman's holidays that I picked up at Boz'es house. A friend of his was there, a German who served in the German army from August, 1914, to December, 1918. Naturally he and I began checking up to see if we had ever been opposite one another. I mentioned hill 304, le mort homme, where we went in September, 1918. Hill 304 was the hottest spot on the front in the second battle of Verdun, 1916.

"Yes, I was there once, in 1916," Mr. Wolffsohn said. "I had a cousin who was stationed there. My regiment was in Belgium. I got two weeks leave—so I went down to hill 304 to see my cousin"!!

Moscow Gets a Subway.

Russia has a subway. This should definitely dispose of the theory that under the Soviet government the Russians have found peace and comfort.

• • • •

The Soviet experiment may now be summed up in seven words: From serfdom to straphanging in 17 years.

• • • •

Stalin's regime has been a success. He found the people fighting for existence on the farms, and he has put them to fighting for seats in a subway.

• • • •

The first underground transit system has been finished in Moscow. It was opened for inspection the other day, free rides being given so everybody could get some preliminary training for the ordeal to come.

• • • •

Stalin took a ride in it. P. S.—He got a seat!

• • • •

He declares it the most beautiful subway in the world, and invites comparisons. In no other subway can you be trampled on amid more artistic surroundings.

• • • •

In digging the subway everybody in Moscow was asked to take a hand. Every able man and woman in the city took a shovel and did a little digging at one time or another. Stalin is a smart ruler. If the people don't like the subway they will have themselves to blame.

• • • •

The enthusiasm with which the people gave a hand in building the line was amazing. It goes to show the determination of a free people to enjoy the privileges of standing up while taking a ride.

• • • •

It will be formally opened soon and we await a movietone record of the first attempt of an Omsk peasant to get direction from a Moscow subway guard.

• • • •

No rules of Russian subway etiquette have as yet been announced, but no placards will be necessary to notify a capitalist that he will be expected to get up and give the proletariat a seat.

Argentina's Trade Balance $45,724,000

New York, April 28.—Argentina's foreign trade figures just published by the National Bureau of Statistics show exports for the first quarter of 1935 of 428,500,000 pesos ($137,977,000) and imports of 286,500,000 pesos ($92,253,000), indicating an excess of exports over imports of 142,000,000 pesos ($45,724,000).

While a comparison with the first quarter of 1934 shows an increase in the volume of foreign trade of 70,900,000 pesos, the export surplus last year was moderately higher, amounting to 151,500,000 pesos during the first three months. Argentine imports from the United States for the first quarter of the current year increased 20 per cent, to 36,700,000 pesos ($11,817,000).

Mexican Psychology Analyzed By Scholar

Samuel Ramos Attributes Weakness Of His Country To Influences Of Foreign Cultures.

By Paul Vanorden Shaw.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

TO psychoanalyze a whole nation is the task to which Samuel Ramos set himself. In his recently published book, "El Perfil del Hombre y la Cultura en Mexico"—An Outline of the Mexican and His Culture—Ramos indulges in an undertaking which amounts to a vivisection of his Mexico and of his compatriots. Pitilessly and relentlessly he probes into the secret recesses of Mexico's social heart and anatomy and with amazing courage he brings his findings to light. In effect he says: "Mexicans, this is what we are. Whether we like it or not, these are the facts and the sooner we face our realities the soon we can redeem ourselves." Ramos is a loyal Mexican, and his work bespeaks a deeper patriotism than those who seek to hide the ugly and to misrepresent unwelcome truths.

This book, one of the first of its kind from a Mexican pen, is, however, one of many which Latin Americans as a whole have produced in recent years. Their appearance can be interpreted in two lights. According to some critics they are the products of morbid, defeatist minds, who have become discouraged by the political, social and other upheavals of their own patrias and peoples. In despair, they rationalize their disloyalty to their own culture by flinging these volumes in the faces of their compatriots and announcing: "No more of you who are dead. I'm going where there is life."

On the other hand, there are those who see in these self-criticisms not morbidity but healthy, realistic introspection and a scientific facing of realities which must precede the correction of faults. This is Ramos' purpose. In several pages he begs his compatriots not to take offense at the picture which he paints of the Mexican and his culture. He pleads with them to accept his psychoanalysis as a first step toward a true solution of Mexico's many problems.

• • • •

HIS key to an understanding of the Mexican and his culture is found in those passages where he discusses the origin, existence and nature of the Mexican inferiority complex. This feeling of inferiority he attributes to racial, cultural and other factors associated primarily with the existence of the native races which, in the eyes of the world, were looked upon as backward, primitive and uncivilized. Since the Indian constitutes the basic block of Mexico's population, this meant that not only the educated Indian but the mestizo and all the others who called themselves Mexican felt deeply and shamefully their connection with a race not highly considered. Deep down, and perhaps in his subconscious self, since Ramos frankly follows the psycho-analytical method, the Mexican felt inferior to other peoples.

Therefore, according to Ramos, the Mexican sought by every means at his command to live down his race, his environment and his history. He denied the realities. He imitated the cultures of other peoples. He adopted their manners, their ideas, their clothing, their philosophy, their everything. He proclaimed to high heaven his superiority. He defied death and ignored the future. He lived on two planes, one fictitious and the other real; but he always denied the real and acted on the assumption that his fictitious life was the real.

And it is in this duality of Mexican character that Ramos finds much of the weakness of Mexican life. Much of Mexico's planning, many of her policies, many of her laws have been elaborated not for the real Mexican but for the fictitious Mexican, the Mexican that looks and talks like a European but who is in reality an American Mexican.

• • • •

RAMOS finds that Spain introduced three elements which have become essential parts of Mexican character. In part they prevailed because they coincided with ideas and institutions of the aboriginal populations; and in part because the Spaniards, as the conquering race, were able to impose them. These were Spain's language and religion and the personal characteristic of the Spaniard, his passionate, rebellious individualism. It was mainly the religious enthusiasm of the Spaniard which coincided with that of the Aztec. In this fact Ramos finds room to disagree with the present efforts to eradicate or emasculate religion. He believes that one of the realities in Mexican character now being denied is precisely this one of religiosity. He admits that the Catholic Church perhaps needed purging of many evils which had crept into its body but he asserts rather dogmatically that to strip the Mexican of all religious outlets might cause far more harm than good.

Ramos also discusses the imitation of French culture and specifies those philosophic and other ideas which the mestizo, the group which came into ascendancy after the wars for independence, borrowed from abroad. They liked the revolutionary spirit, the liberalism, the democracy and the Jacobinism of France. For one thing, these institutions could be used to combat the enemies of the Mexicans at home, and, for another, the adoption of these French intellectual and cultural ideas would stamp the mestizos as "civilized" and cultured in the European sense.

But, as Ramos suggests, the borrowing was not complete. The inner, the subjective meanings of these institutions could not be carried across the seas and injected into a people to whom they were neither suited nor intended and who, furthermore, were living an artificial life in an imaginary land far removed from reality. Grafting a branch of a mulberry tree on a maguey plant!

• • • •

IN HIS biography of Porfirio Diaz, Carleton Beals describes the transmutations in the life of Don Porfirio and illustrates to a certain extent Ramos' argument. Porfirio Diaz began his public life as an "Indian," became a "mestizo" and died a European!" Biologically he was a mestizo, but in the first part of his career, when Indianism was first rearing its head, he sided with Benito Juarez and his Indian followers. Later he became himself; but finally sought "true culture" in the arms and training of a European wife.

Toward the end of his book, Ramos has a chapter on the abandonment of culture. His point is that, without fully realizing it, the Mexican wearied of copying European forms and finally turned to the utilitarian philosophy of the United States. He gave up the search for "culture," by which refined culture and manners is indicated, and adopted the American's ideas about money, manual labor, machines and speed. And though all of this might be good in itself, Ramos looks upon this borrowing as added evidence of the Mexican's inferiority complex and of his imitativeness. Again another grafting on maguey plants of automobiles and dynamos.

Ramos is not pessimistic, however. He believes the Mexican will some day cast off his childish and sub-conscious shame with respect to his race, environment and traditions, frankly face them and then will build anew from the bottom up. He pleads for moral and intellectual discipline. He is a humanist and humanitarian and believes that the "scientific" attitude of the last decades of the nineteenth and the first of the twentieth centuries must yield to a more realistic view of life in general and of Mexican life in particular. He does not despair of Mexico and believes his nation has a fine future if the fictions on which its life are based will be exchanged for facts and realities.

IT is easy to see that this work has already influenced the Mexico of today. It has been enthusiastically received and reviewed by many intellectuals and one can detect in certain official utterances ideas similar to those expounded by Ramos. Books still are tremendously influential in Latin America and this one may prove to be a turning point in Mexican life.

If Ramos' psychoanalytical approach to the ills of a whole nation has any validity, and he offers enough historical evidence to suggest that his method may have its points, he has opened a new avenue for studying the reactions of races upon races. Moreover, he has added material for the consideration of Mexican and Latin American evolution from the point of view of racial and cultural mixtures and frictions.

In any event this frank facing of facts must bear good fruit. No nation can progress without a clear conception of its true faults. Ramos has not pulled his punches in giving a picture of Mexico as he sees it.

Stories About Pictures You're Seeing.

Hollywood April 27.

"CARDINAL RICHELIEU." George Arliss, as is his custom, rehearsed the entire company for two weeks before an actor faced the camera. . . . A dozen scripts were prepared and submitted before Arliss finally okayed a shooting script. . . . Regardless of who directs and who writes an Arliss flicker, you will always see, if you look for it, the name of Maude V. Howell on the screen. Miss Howell looks over the scenario for Arliss, works on it, and as the important scenes are being filmed she sits on the set. After Arliss has played a scene he looks toward Miss Howell for her opinion. She is the power behind the Arliss historical characters.

Arliss generally quits work at exactly 4:30 every afternoon. His man, George Jenner, walks, watch in hand, toward Arliss. Arliss stops emoting, bids the company good afternoon and walks quickly toward his dressing room . . . On this flicker, Arliss waved Jenner away and several times worked past 5 o'clock.

• • • •

Maureen O'Sullivan, when she wasn't working in a scene, sat in a camp chair embroidering linen handkerchiefs. These linen handkerchiefs are now being used by John Farrow . . . The flicker cost about $700,000 and Director Rowland V. Lee shot the script in five weeks. This is fast time, for a spectacle of this type generally requires at least two months of shooting . . . Cesear Romero is much taller than Maureen O'Sullivan and she couldn't reach his lips to be kissed in the love scenes . . . Instead of making Romero bend low, Director Lee decided to have Romero pick Miss O'Sullivan up in his arms when he kissed her.

• • • •

APPROXIMATELY 120,000 feet of film was used in shooting "Cardinal Richelieu" . . . At the rate of nine minutes for each 1,000-foot reel it would have taken Producer Darryl Zanuck exactly 18 hours to watch the entire footage run off—and that is how long you would stay in the movie theater if you saw the "Cardinal Richelieu" which was filmed . . . Instead, Zanuck got the picture ready daily, after he saw the rushes . . . The first rough assemblage of the picture was in 17 reels. It then was fashioned to ordinary theater running time and the picture you now see is in nine reels.

"MISSISSIPPI." This flicker was originally written for Lanny Ross, but after "College Rhythm," both Mr. Ross and Paramount decided to part company and Bing Crosby was given the assignment . . . Richard Rogers and Larry Hart had already written the score and were in New York. They wrote an additional song for Crosby, without cost.

• • •

W. C. Fields consented to appear in the picture if his favorite writer, Jack Cunningham, was assigned to the script. Fields insists on Cunningham working on all his flickers . . . Cunningham stays on the set with Fields and they improvise lines and gags as the picture is being filmed. Mae West's maid and George Raft's valet and handy man play bits in the flicker . . . Miss West's maid, Libby Taylor, plays the role of Joan Bennett's maid . . . Mr. Raft's valet, Alex Hill, is the colored boy who rides on the top of the stage coach with Fields and plays somewhat straight for him in the brief comedy scene when they are riding to Miss Bennett's engagement party at the beginning of the flicker.

• • • •

"GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS." The set of this picture was known as George White's night club. The usual picture in Hollywood starts shooting at about 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning and continues until about 6 o'clock in the evening. White shot the picture practically the same as he rehearses a Broadway show . . . White would call production for 3 o'clock in the afternoon. He would arrive at 3:30 o'clock and look at the rushes with his cameraman, his staff, and whatever chorus girls were around . . . At 5 o'clock in the afternoon, White would start work by rehearsing the chorines . . . He would also act out the roles with Alice Fay, Lyda Roberti, Arline Judge, Eleanor Powell or any other member of the cast who happened to be in the scene . . . Director James Tinling would sit in a chair and watch White . . . Dance Director Jack Donahue first started to stage the dances but he and White didn't get along and soon George was putting on the numbers himself.

• • • •

Dinner would be called for one hour at 6 o'clock. The real work would then start at 7 o'clock . . . At midnight, White would send out to a nearby restaurant for steaks or turkey dinners and feed every one on the set, actors and technicians, paying for the meals himself . . . Work would then be resumed in an hour and they would shoot until 3 or 4 in the morning. Several mornings they shot until 7 o'clock . . . Eleanor Powell was kept waiting a month before White called her before the camera. It was amusing to watch George White direct himself in a scene and, after finishing, saying aloud: "White, you were very good in that scene."

Stock Upturn Lifts Spirits Of Wall Street

Million-Share Days and Refunding Plans Help to Banish Gloom.

By Claude A. Jagger.
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, April 28.—Wall street is, in the best spirits in months. Causes for the better feeling in that recently so gloomy thoroughfare are not far to seek. For instance:

Share prices are bumping the best levels of 1935.

A succession of 1,000,000-share days such as have not been experienced since last July has just been completed with dozens of corporations working on refunding plans, investment houses more active than they have been in a long time.

Some quarters in the street say they do not like the business outlook any too well. They reiterate that the seasonal trend of industrial activity should be downward until midsummer, and that such major lines as steel and textiles are producing at rates well under this time last year.

On the other hand, the automobile industry has just completed the highest production week since 1929, retail trade is running well above last year, scores of industries are looking for stimulation from the $4,000,000,000 work-relief program, idle funds continue to pile up in the banks, and the spectacular rise in silver has given speculative markets a little inflationary enthusiasm, without much disturbing the investment market.

Save for the nonferrous metal group, the stock market last week was unable to break through the ceiling established in February. This prompted considerable profit taking. In the aggregate, not much upward progress was made. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished the week at 39.8, up only .2 from the previous Saturday.

The past week was not without a sprinkling of bad news. Trading was halted for a day in the Chicago wheat pits by reorganization of a large grain firm, and a General Motors plant at Toledo was shut down by a labor dispute. But these developments failed to jar sentiment very much. Grains held up well in the face of the unusual situation in the pits. Wheat futures showed net losses for the week of 1¼ to 2 cents a bushel. Cotton, on the other hand, registered advances of 35 cents to $1.60 a bale, and raw sugar touched the highest prices since 1928.

Industrial and Utility Bonds at Year's High.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—Placing of the largest refunding issue in several years, $73,000,000 Southern California Edison, and active preparations to redeem other large blocks of outstanding securities, occupied number one position in the bond market last week.

Trading in existing obligations was not neglected, however, and appreciable markups were recorded in all divisions of the list except the prime investment groups which marked time due principally to the continued popularity of the refunding vogue. The Associated Press averages for both the industrial and utility divisions touched new 1935 tops during the week. Foreign bonds were little changed and U. S. Governments developed a degree of selectivity that left quoted values in this section generally mixed.

B. & O. Net Rises 22% in Quarter

Net railway operating income of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. for the first quarter of this year amounted to $6,328,483, compared with $5,160,929 for the first three months of last year, an increase of $1,167,554, or 22.6 per cent.

Operating expenses were reduced $1,080,268, totaling for the three months $24,926,165, against $25,986,433 for the like 1934 period.

For March net railway operating income was $2,725,045, compared with $1,809,480 for February, and with $2,512,436 for March, 1934, an increase over a year ago of $212,609, or 8.5 per cent.

Total operating revenue in March amounted to $12,512,055, compared with $10,718,566 in February and $12,114,492 for March, 1934, a decrease from a year ago of $202,537.

First Liberty Bond Exchange At $910,000,000

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that in response to the offering last Monday of Treasury bonds and Treasury notes, in exchange for First Liberty Loan bonds called for redemption on June 15, 1935, subscriptions aggregating $910,000,000 had been received up to the close of business Saturday. The subscription books for both offerings will remain open until further notice.

The Secretary stated that approximately $605,000,000 of the First Liberty Loan bonds had been exchanged for the 1¾ per cent Treasury Notes of Series A-1940, and $305,000,000 for the 2¾ per cent Treasury bonds of 1955-60.

Wheat and Corn Exports Lower

Exports of wheat (including flour as wheat) from United States and Canadian ports, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for the week ended April 20, 1935, totaled 2,364,000 bushels, as compared with 2,798,000 bushels in the previous week and 7,317,302 bushels in the corresponding week of last year. For the season, July 1 to date, wheat exports aggregated 121,729,247 bushels, as against 165,801,541 bushels for the same period a year ago.

Corn exports for this week were nil, compared with nothing in the preceding week and 6,000 bushels last year.

Spurt in World Silver Price Stimulates Broad Speculative Activity Here and Abroad; Cessation of U. S. Buying Could Bring Quick Collapse.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 28.—A new disturbing factor has been introduced into the business and financial outlook, both in this country and abroad, by the too great success of the Treasury's silver purchase program in raising the price of the metal. The immediate effect of the spurt of more than 10 cents an ounce in the world price of this metal during the past week has been to arouse latent speculative interest in various markets, especially where it is felt that the rise in silver may have some direct repercussions.

Pool operations formerly played an important role in developing "bull markets" on the stock exchange through causing abrupt advances in prices of particular stocks. Such advances often stimulated buying of shares generally by speculators who hoped that the performance would be repeated by other stocks.

The securities exchange act presumably bars such manipulative speculative operations in particular issues designed to attract public purchasing to the security markets. However, through arbitrarily advancing the price of silver metal and thus greatly increasing the profits of silver mining companies, the Treasury program has been whipping up speculative activity in much the same way as the "bull pools" in the stock market did formerly. As a result, activity on the stock exchange has expanded to an average daily turnover of 1,500,000 shares last week, while speculative interest in several of the commodity markets has been heightened also.

Needless to say, feverish speculative activity has been most notable in the market for silver shares and silver metal. This has been so not only in this country, but also in a number of other financial centers, especially London, Shanghai and Bombay.

China and Mexico Injured; India May Be Affected soon.

In the meanwhile, the artificial and fundamentally purposeless rise in the quotation of the white metal to the level of 80 cents an ounce is working substantial injury upon several other countries. China continues to struggle to retain her monetary silver stock, despite the powerful attraction exercised by the rising world price of the metal, her officials are believed likely, in desperation, to abandon her traditional silver bullion standard and to substitute paper money, or new silver coins with a reduced metallic content, based upon the pound sterling or gold. The fact that the Hong Kong dollar rose from 52.75 cents to 60.50 cents during the past week indicates the extent of the deflationary pressure which higher silver prices exercise. The prejudice of the Chinese people against a change from the silver bullion standard discourages such a move, however.

The persistent rise in the price of silver has finally forced Mexico to change her monetary system. The Mexican government had been pegging the silver peso to the dollar latterly at 27.85 cents. As long as silver remained below 72½ cents an ounce, the exchange value of the peso was higher than its silver content. When our Treasury raised the buying price for newly mined metal to 77.53 cents an ounce, however, and caused the world price to soar, the silver content of the peso became worth about 30 cents in American money. The peso has now risen above 30 cents, and, to avoid the deflationary effect of a further advance in its quotation, the Mexican government has called in outstanding silver coins. It will seek to substitute for them paper currency of the Bank of Mexico. Eventually new silver coins of greatly reduced silver content may be issued.

India is in the same position as Mexico, except that the silver content of the rupee is smaller in relation to its foreign exchange value. The rupee is pegged to the pound sterling at 18 pence, equal to about 35⅓ cents, while its silver content is now worth about 27 cents. If silver should go above $1.04 an ounce, however, the silver in the rupee would be worth more than its exchange value. If the pound sterling should decline further, then the point at which it would pay to melt down rupees for their silver content would be reached even sooner. Accordingly, if the world price of silver should rise much further, the new Reserve Bank of India, charged by law with the duty of maintaining the stability of the rupee in relation to the pound, would have to follow the lead of the Bank of Mexico and substitute paper currency or new rupees with a greatly reduced metallic content for the present coins.

Possible Collapse Of the Silver Boom.

With China and India thus likely to demonetize silver, and with Mexico already doing so, the extremely artificial character of the silver boom becomes more evident than ever. Instead of broadening the monetary demand for the metal, as the persistent and mightily successful silver bloc in the Senate had predicted, the American buying program is making such demand more narrow than ever. Hence, whenever it becomes evident that American buying in the world market has ceased, a serious collapse in silver and related speculative markets would be likely. If the Treasury should raise the domestic buying price for newly mined silver to $1.29 per ounce, as the silver Senators desire, and then announce a cessation of buying in foreign markets, this would probably occur without delay.

The immediate financial outlook here and abroad is thus further complicated by the silver issue, in itself of very narrow significance because of the limited extent of the silver mining industry, the one direct beneficiary of the whole fantastic program. The Treasury now has a bear by the tail, in that further prosecution of its purchases would cause serious repercussions in other countries, while an announcement that purchases have stopped would bring a speculative collapse in the artificially inflated world market for silver.

Gold Is a Leader, Copper a Laggard In Metal Trades

New York, April 28.—A new section introduced in the Statistical Bulletin contains tables showing the relationship between the prices of various metals. The figures are expressed as indices on the basis of 1913 equaling 100 and the prices of gold are included, affording a measure of the changes in the value of money.

Sterling and gold prices in London and dollar and gold prices in New York are tabulated separately, the figures being given annually since 1925 and monthly since January, 1934. The following figures selected from these tables show the price of tin compared with five other metals, London sterling prices of 1913 equaling 100:

	1929	Mar. 1935
Gold	100.0	172.8
Copper	110.5	41.8
Aluminum	113.6	119.6
Nickel	101.8	119.1
Tinplate	134.2	136.3
Tin	101.1	107.1

Silver, because of its sensational advances, is in a class by itself and is not included in the table.

New York Bank Stocks Continue to Advance

New York, April 28.—New York City bank stock continued to gain during the past week, according to records compiled by Holt, Rose & Troster. The aggregate value of 16 leading issues totaled $1,264,115,000 on April 26, compared with $1,247,056,000 on April 18, an increase of $17,059,000, or 1.37 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 5.60 per cent compares with a yield of 5.68 per cent, on April 18. The current market value is now 1.04 times the known book value against 1.02 times at the close of the previous week. Based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 11.9 times their known earnings, compared with 11.8 times on April 18.

Caterpillar Tractor Declares 25c Extra

Peoria, Ill., April 28 (AP).—Directors of the Caterpillar Tractor Co. have declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a share and the usual quarterly payment of 25 cents a share, both payable May 31 to stock of record May 15.

On February 28 the company voted a disbursement of 25 cents a share and on November 30 an extra of 50 cents was paid.

U. G. I. Net Dips To $31,088,150

$1.17 a Share Compares With $1.22 in Previous 12 Months.

Net income of the United Gas Improvement Co. and subsidiaries, excluding the Philadelphia Gas Works Co., for the year ended March 31, totaled $31,088,150 after expenses, taxes, interest, subsidiary charges and minority interest, equivalent after preferred dividends to $1.17 a share on the outstanding common stock. This compares with net income of $32,294,924, or $1.22 a share, in the preceding year.

Net income for the three months ended March 31, totaled $8,105,585, after expenses, taxes, interest, subsidiary charges, etc., equivalent after preferred dividends to 30 cents a share on the common stock. This compares with net income of $8,481,187, or 32 cents a common share in the first quarter last year.

American Bank Note Co. and subsidiaries reports for the quarter ended March 31 net profit of $171,666, equivalent to 16 cents a share on the common stock. In the same period last year there was a net loss of $188,545.

The Frank G. Shattuck Co., owner of Schrafft's chain of restaurants, had a consolidated net loss of $3,134 for the three months ended March 31. This compares with net profit of $100,079, or 7 cents a share on the capital stock for the first quarter of 1934.

Quarterly Income Shares, Inc., reports total assets of $31,648,845.17, with investments taken at cost, for the quarter ended April 15, in the statement being mailed to stockholders with the May 1 distribution check. This compares with total assets of $29,952,508.98 at the end of the preceding quarter. The total distribution of $765,570.99 being paid to stockholders which is at the rate of 3 cents per share, is the largest amount that has been made for any quarterly period to date.

$25,915,900 Financing Scheduled for Week

New York, April 28 (AP).—A total of $25,915,900 of new financing is scheduled for this week by 51 municipalities and two States, says the Daily Bond Buyer.

The total of such offerings in the current week was $36,941,000.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Lots of premieres today, but what with daylight saving time in New York and local commercials here, our Washington stations will miss some of them.

"Tony and Gus," who have had an enormous build-up while guesting on other programs, start their series today, on WMAL, 6:15 p. m. They will be heard daily except Saturdays and Sundays.

In real life "Tony" is Mario Chamlee, former Metropolitan opera star, and lately featured on the Sunday offering, "Garden Hour." He takes the part of a young Italian lad with musical ambitions. Gus (in plain English, George Frame Brown) is the author of the script, and portrays a young Swedish pug with appropriate ambitions along prize-fighting lines.

The other noteworthy premiere is the first appearance of Maxie Baer in his series, "Lucky Smith." He will play the part of a detective under the sponsorship of a razor blade company. Negotiations are under way to broadcast Maxie's fight with James Braddock June 13.

Columbia's premiere of the day is "Six-Gun Justice," a drama with a Western setting, a ranch-owner hero, a rival ranch-owner villain, the villain's Eastern niece (probably the heroine) and a vociferous lady named "Mrs. Pete." This is heard on WJSV at 8 p. m.

A new health series starts today on WJSV at 10 a. m. "Famous Babies" brings expert advice on the upbringing of offspring, and introduces parents of celebrated children, who probably will explain how their offspring became famous.

The series is conducted by Dr. Louis I. Harris, former health commissioner of New York.

Speeches:

Sir Josiah Stamp, director of the Bank of England, speaks at a luncheon in his honor, WRC, 12:30 p. m. His subject: "Regulated Industry in Britain."

Merle Thorpe, editor of "Nation's Business," is on WJSV at 10:05 p. m.

Senator McGill, of Kansas, and Senator Schall, of Minnesota, are on WRC at 5 p. m.

Best musical bets:

Mildred Dilling, harpist, is guest of the N. B. C. Music Guild, WMAL, 1:30 p. m. Miss Dilling, with the assistance of the N. B. C. String Quartet, will play Marcel Tournier's "Feevie" and Saint-Saens' "Fantasie." The quartet presents Fritz Kreisler's Quartet in A minor.

Ravel's "Bolero" is featured on the "Contented Hour," WRC, 9 p. m.

Best dramatic bet is "Pas Seul," the story of a dancer, on WMAL at 3:30 p. m. This is another of the original British Broadcasting productions, written by Laurie and Tom Devine.

"Behind the Mask," a comedy of love and laughter, is on WMAL at 8:30 p. m.

Saturday a telephone call brought the following message:

"The citizens of Arlington County greatly appreciate the fine baseball broadcasts of Arch McDonald. We are deeply appreciate of the Peoples Drug Store program, and deal with their chain. (Signed) Joseph F. Warder."

Behind the speaking voice an undercurrent of talking could be heard—Arch himself, giving his blow-by-blow descriptions.

Offsets Keep Steel Capacity At 46 Per Cent

Shape Awards During Week Increased to 13,900 Tons.

Cleveland, April 28.—Gains in steelworks operations at Pittsburgh and Chicago, responsive to slightly better demand for heavy finished steel, were offset last week by losses in some other districts due to lighter specifications for sheets and strip, continuing the national average at 46 per cent, states the magazine Steel.

Although automobile assemblies again were increased by 1,000 to 111,000 for the week, new commitments were smaller, manufacturers working down inventories. Finished sheet production dropped 3 points to 74 per cent; cold rolled strip 3 to 54.

May 22 is the date when steelmakers must decide on prices for third quarter, and while some express strong sentiment for an advance, others believe it might prove too great a burden on consumers coming so soon after a general freight rate increase. These also contend that the only result would be to drive in tonnage ahead of the effective date, with a sharp depression in July and August, and little tonnage at the higher levels until fourth quarter.

Structural shape awards in the week increased moderately to 13,900 tons, including 7,500 tons of steel piling for piers at the Boston Army base. Additional requirements of 30,000 tons of shapes will be up for figures shortly for New York's Triboro bridge and the New York approach to the midtown Hudson River tunnel. Also, in addition to 15,000 tons of reinforcing bars for the Fort Peck, Montana, dam spillway gate structure, now pending, 17,000 tons are to be purchased soon for the spillway. American Oil Co., Baltimore, will build a river transport terminal at Hays, Pa., which will take 3,000 to 4,000 tons of plates.

A large tonnage of shapes and plates will be required if Congress passes the naval construction bill as introduced last week, calling for 24 new ships, and funds for continuing work on 30 others now being built.

Tune in on Our Radio Program, Station WJSV, 8:30 Every Friday Night.

"Mama," whispered little Willie as the great conductor took his place in the orchestra pit and the famous soprano began her aria, "what's the man shaking the stick at her for?"

"Shut up!" Mama explained. "That's his baton. He isn't shaking it at her."

"Then what's she hollerin' for?"

That, we are sad to report, is little Willie's reaction to good music. The case of his sister is even worse. She just loves to prattle about how much she adores good music, but when she has an opportunity to listen to a great symphony she stays home and tunes the radio to Cab Calloway's band. She thinks that arpeggio is an island in the Pacific and that Chaikovski was a Russian general. You see, little Willie and his sister have not read the excellent articles by Ray C. B. Brown in The Washington Post; and, therefore, are not en rapport with things musical. But there is hope for them even now, and we are starting a subscription to The Post for them in order that they may learn the intellectual pleasure to be derived from listening to classical music.

Mr. Brown is one of America's best known music critics, and his authoritative, intelligent, sensitive articles are required reading for music lovers. Washington is becoming more and more music conscious, and The Post is proud of the part Mr. Brown has played in explaining the works of great composers to new listeners. For two years he was managing editor of Musical America and his writings are studied closely by students. In his "Postlude" column, discussing the programs presented by symphony orchestras, choral groups and others, he strikes a new note in criticism.

Like his good friend, Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, the "tune detector," Mr. Brown can listen to Tin Pan Alley's latest song hit and tell you instantly the symphony from which the theme was stolen, and, if you question him closely, he might remember the older work from which the symphony composer borrowed a few bars!

In The Sunday Post you'll find an entire page devoted to music, and the leading article, always written by Mr. Brown, will give you a deeper, more sympathetic understanding of all things musical. Nowadays, when Stravinski's "Firebird" suite is discussed at the dinner table along with the New Deal and Europe's war scare, you'll find Ray C. B. Brown's brilliant articles of great help in convincing your hostess that you, too, can recognize Bloch's "Schelomo" and that you can discuss Hindemith with the best of them. If you are a lover of good music you'll appreciate his clear, authentic criticisms; if you are just learning to listen to the great symphonies you'll demand his help. You'll find it in

The Eyes of Fashion Seekers Turn to Youngest Socialites Who Set Style Pace

Miss Patricia Sheridan and Master Michael Sheridan, children of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Sheridan, with Master Albert Small, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Small, might possibly be discussing the baseball situation.

Three little women who were glimpsed on a recent outing and who graciously consented to pose for the photographer. They are Miss Caroline Warner and her two younger sisters, Betty and Virginia, children of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Warner, jr., of Chevy Chase, Md.

Some of the members of the Capital's youngest set meet on the Avenue on a bright, sunshiny spring morning and pause to chat, perhaps about school affairs. They are, left to right—Mary de Gharagozlou, Miss Katherine Pagan, Bernice Klaban, Turan de Gharagozlou and Master Stanley Klaban.

Miss Deakyne Becomes Bride Of Dr. Waldron

Daughter of Retired Army Officer Is Married at Fort Peck, Mont.

A simple but charming wedding took place Wednesday at Fort Peck, Mont., where Miss Rosalind Deakyne, daughter of Brig. Gen. Herbert Deakyne, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Deakyne, was married to Dr. George W. Waldron, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert George Waldron, of Rochester, Minn. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Capt. and Mrs. John B. Hughes. The Rev. T. Malcolm Jones, of the Episcopal Church, officiated.

Greens were banked on the mantel against a background of crimson velvet reaching from the ceiling to the floor and Easter lilies stood at each side of the prayer bench. Two silver candelabra on the mantelpiece held tall, white candles.

To the strains of the Lohengrin Wedding March the bride came down the stairs on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. Her dress was of white satin, made on princess lines, with long sleeves puffed above the elbows. On it was appliqued a deep bertha of rose point lace, a family heirloom. Her tulle veil fell from a tiny medieval coronet of rare old lace, held at each side by a small cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley. Mrs. John B. Hughes was her sister's matron of honor. She wore a dress of beige lace and a large straw hat of the same tint trimmed with turquoise velvet ribbon. Her slippers were turquoise and she carried a bouquet of talisman roses and blue iris. Robert Griffin Waldron was his brother's best man.

After the ceremony a buffet wedding breakfast was served.

The bride's mother wore a gown of French blue crepe and a matching jacket with dolman sleeves. Her hat was pink straw and her corsage was violets and pink roses. The bridegroom's mother was gowned in dusty rose chiffon and wore a large black hat with a white flower. Her corsage was gardenias.

The bride's traveling costume was of navy blue trimmed with white pique. Her hat was navy blue straw with a white bow and her accessories were blue. She carried a gray fur coat. After a trip Mr. and Mrs. Waldron will be at home at Fort Peck, where Dr. Waldron is in charge of the Government hospital.

Counsel of RFC Engaged to Wed

James Burke Alley and Mrs. Hall Lowe Will Marry May 16.

The engagement is announced of Mrs. Hall Lowe and Mr. James Burke Alley. Mrs. Lowe is the daughter of Mrs. Harrison Hall and the late Col. Harrison Hall.

Mr. Alley is the son of Mrs. Albert R. Alley and the late Mr. Alley, of Tennessee and New York. Mr. Alley lives in Jericho, Long Island, and is temporarily residing in Washington, where he is general counsel of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Mr. Alley is a member of the Bar Association of New York, also the Harvard Club of New York, the Piping Rock and the Aviation clubs of Long Island and the Metropolitan Club of Washington.

The wedding will take place in Washington on May 16 at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Lars Anderson.

Sweet Briar Honors Miss Eleanor Rust

Fairfax Senior Maid of Honor for Festival.

Miss Eleanor Rust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Warwick Rust, of Fairfax, will take a prominent part in the celebration of the annual May Day Festival Friday at Sweet Briar College.

Miss Rust, who is a member of the senior class, has been chosen as maid of honor in the Queen's Court on this occasion and will crown the queen at the afternoon ceremonies in the East Dell of the college.

The May Festival is one of the most important extra-curricular events at Sweet Briar, older even than commencement, for it was begun the first year the college opened, in 1907, and the first class did not graduate until three years later, in 1910.

It is an all-day festival, with a horse show in the morning, the crowning of the queen and the presentation of an outdoor pageant in the afternoon, and the May Day dance at night.

Party in Honor Of Jane Addams Set for Friday

Mrs. George Rublee to Be Hostess When U. S. Women Are Praised.

Mrs. George Rublee is giving a luncheon party at her home, 2840 Woodland drive, on Friday, in honor of Jane Addams and the group of distinguished American women who helped found the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom at The Hague in 1915, and are coming to Washington this week to celebrate its twentieth anniversary. Mrs. Rublee was a member of the original group.

Her guest list includes in addition to the guests of honor, Mrs. Hannah Clothier Hull, of Philadelphia, national president of the Women's International League, together with the members of its national board. The guests of honor are:

Miss Grace Abbott, University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Fannie Fern Andrews, Boston, Mass.; Dr. Sophonisba P. Breckinridge, University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill.; Miss Alice Carpenter, Smith College, Northampton, Mass.; Mrs. Charles Umsted; Miss Grace de Graff, Portland, Oreg.; Miss Constance Drexel, Miss Katharine Glover, Redonda Beach, Calif.; Dr. Alice Hamilton, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.; Miss Anna M. Evelyn Newman, dean of women, Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla.; Mrs. Mary Heaton Vorse, Mrs. Louis F. Post, Mrs. Juliet Barrett Rublee, Mrs. Harriet Park Thomas, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Charles Edward Russell, Miss Julia Grace Wales, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.; Miss Angela Morgan, Ogontz School, Rydal, Pa.

The members of the committee in charge of arrangements includes Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, Miss Mary Anderson, Dr. Gertrude C. Bussey, Miss Dorothy Detzer, Miss Eve Garrette, Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Miss Edith Goode, Mrs. Frank A. Hecht, Mrs. Lucy Biddle Lewis, Mrs. Frederick Libby, Mrs. Carroll Miller, Mrs. Mildred Scott Olmsted, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Michael Straus, Mrs. L. Carrin Strong, Miss Mabel Vernon, Miss Mary Moss Wellborn and Miss Elizabeth Wheeler.

Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Espenscheid were hosts at a supper party in the ballroom of the Shoreham last evening in honor of their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Connell, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Other guests were Dr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Muldoon, Mr. and Mrs. Stafford Shaw, Miss Mary Shaw and Mr. John Mountain.

Lt. Morin Weds Marion Wilson, Vanderbilt Kin

100 Guests at Shady Lawn See Son of Former Representative Marry.

Miss Marion Mason Wilson, well-known horsewoman and daughter of Mrs. Richard T. Wilson and the late Mr. Wilson, of New York and Newport, R. I., was married Saturday noon to Lieut. William A. M. Morin, U. S. A., attached to the Second Battalion of the Thirteenth Infantry at Fort Adams, R. I.

The wedding ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. John Tahey, chaplain of the Mercy Home and School, took place at Shady Lawn, the summer home of Mrs. Wilson. There were about 100 guests.

Lieut. Morin, a member of the class of 1931 of the United States Military Academy, is the son of former Representative John M. Morin, of Pittsburgh.

The bride was given in marriage by her cousin, Mr. Robert Goelet. She was attired in a gown of white satin fashioned on princess style. Her bouquet was of white orchids and gardenias. Her only attendant was Countess Alexandrine Beroldingen.

The bridegroom had as his best man a brother Infantry officer, Lieut. Russell Bowman Semple, and the ushers were Mr. John Winslow, Mr. Richard Stedman and Mr. Maitland Armstrong.

Following the ceremony a breakfast was served. Later in the afternoon Lieut. Morin and his bride left for Hot Springs, Va., to visit Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, aunt of the bride. They will return to Rhode Island in a fortnight and will take up residence at Fort Adams, but during the summer will go to Fort Benning, Ga., where Lieut. Morin will have his next tour of duty at the Infantry School.

Carmichaels Favor Smiths of Carolina

General and Wife Serve Tea for Senator and Wife.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Roderick L. Carmichael entertained at tea yesterday afternoon in their home on Cliffbourne place in honor of Senator and Mrs. Ellison Smith, of South Carolina.

The drawing and dining rooms were artistically decorated with pastel-shaded flowers. The guest of honor was wearing a gown of dark blue chiffon made on simple lines with a girdle of American beauty and lavender chiffon, the long sash-ends of which were pleated. Mrs. Carmichael was costumed in gray lace with orchid accessories.

Those who took turns at the tea table were Mrs. L. J. Dickinson, Mrs. Herbert M. Lord, Mrs. Willoughby Chesley, Mrs. Edwin E. Hickman and Mrs. James E. Mather.

Those who assisted were Mrs. Alfred Lawton, who before her marriage last year was Miss Isobel Smith, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Smith, and Mrs. George Robinson Mather, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Carmichael.

Mrs. Paul Healy Hostess At Dinner in Shoreham

Mrs. Paul Healy was hostess at a dinner party in the ballroom at the Shoreham Saturday evening, having as her guests Admiral and Mrs. Hutchinson Cone, Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, Brig. Gen. William W. Harts, Mrs. Arthur Sears Henning, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis and Mr. J. Whitla Stinson.

Mrs. Healy, who has been visiting in Washington and is a guest at the Shoreham, expects to sail May 18 on the Ile de France to return to Paris for the early summer. Later she will go to London.

Vacation Days Not Far Away, So Thoughts Turn to Clothes

With summer vacation not far away and the gay rollicking circus days even closer, the members of Washington's youngest set reluctantly turn their busy minds to bothersome thoughts of clothes.

Recently seen between acts at the matinee were Patricia Sheridan, her brother, Michael, and Albert Small. Patricia, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Sheridan, was attired in navy blue and white, the popular color combination of the season. Her coat had a collar of white pique and her upturned brimmed hat of straw was trimmed with a wide white band and streamers. Master Small, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Small, was wearing an all-brown ensemble, while young Michael wore dashing black and white checks with a gray felt hat, black oxfords and striped socks.

A trio of attractive sisters, Caroline, Betty and Virginia Warner, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Warner, of Chevy Chase, Md., were observed not long ago out enjoying the fresh air. Caroline was attired in spring green, with her matching hat sportily turned up in the back. Her socks were white and her strap pumps of patent leather. Her younger sisters were clad alike in little double-breasted coats of golden yellow with collars of black velvet. Their hats, of the same shade as their coats, were made on the same lines as that of their sister, but were turned up in the front instead.

The other morning the little De Gharagozlou girls, Mary and Turan, daughters of Mme. Gharagozlou, daughters of Bme. Gharagozlou, were glimpsed on the street talking to Stanley Klaban and his small sister Bernice. Mary and Turan were smartly dressed alike in red jackets over brown skirts, with which they wore brown hats. Little Bernice wore a camel's-hair coat and beret over a printed blouse and skirt. Her brother was attired in brown, which seems to be the choice of the majority of the young men this spring.

Two attractive young misses who recently were seen chatting are Miss June Sauer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Sauer, and little Betsy Ann King, daughter of Mrs. Frances King. Miss Sauer was wearing a frock of peach and white printed gingham with white shoes and socks and a leghorn hat. Her little companion had on a skirt of blue and white checks with a dark blue jacket and a bright red straw hat. White socks and patent leather pumps completed her costume.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Resident

Mrs. Roosevelt will be the guest of honor at a breakfast to be given today by the Congressional Club at the Mayflower Hotel. The party, the club's annual one in honor of the First Lady, will begin at noon and will be followed by a program by Miss Doris Doe, of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

The Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, left Washington yesterday for Boston, where he expects to remain for several days.

The Ambassador of Germany, Dr. Hans Luther, will be host at a reception this afternoon in honor of Dr. Gustav Pauli, former director of the Hamburg Art Gallery, who will deliver an illustrated talk on "Romanticism in Painting."

This evening the ambassador will entertain at dinner in the embassy.

Secretary, Mrs. Roper Entertain at Lunch.

Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper entertained at luncheon yesterday in their home on Woodland drive. The guests of honor were Gov. Gen. John Troy of Alaska, and Mr. Arthur M. Chamberlin, who accompanied the Governor to Washington.

The Chief of Finance of the Army and Mrs. Frederick W. Coleman have left Washington for West Point, where they will visit the former's brother-in-law and sister, Col. and Mrs. Clifton C. Carter.

Col. and Mrs. Carter also have with them their son and daughter-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. Marshall S. Carter, who recently returned from station in Honolulu. Before her marriage last July, Mrs. Carter was Miss Preot Nichols, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. William Robert Nichols.

Mrs. Harry Woodring To Be Party Hostess.

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War, will be hostess at luncheon tomorrow in the presidential dining room of the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. Charles G. Edwards, of Savannah, Ga., and her son, Mr. Beach Edwards, have arrived in Washington for an indefinite stay and are stopping at the Raleigh Hotel. Mrs. Edwards is the widow of the late Representative Edwards, of Georgia, who served nine terms in the House.

Miss Aileen Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Harris, has as her guest for several days, Miss Anne Dunham, of Bryn Mawr, Pa.

Mrs. Harvey Returns To City With Daughter.

Mrs Julien Harvey, of New York City, is again in town for an indefinite stay, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Jane Harvey. They are at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. Marcel Colin will entertain at a bridge luncheon at the Shoreham today for her sister, Mrs. Thomas Parkes, of Nashville, Tenn.

Mrs. Fickel Off To Make Talks In Middle West

Democratic Official Will Give Addresses at Party Meetings.

Mrs. June Fickel, assistant director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, left yesterday for a speaking tour which will take her into Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota, Minnesota and Indiana.

As regional adviser for the women's division for the Midwestern district, she will preside at the regional conference to be held in Omaha, Nebr., on Friday and Saturday. In Omaha she will meet Miss Harriet Elliott, director of study groups for the division, who is on a two-month field trip. Miss Elliott has been in the Northern States and on the West Coast the last month helping to conduct regional conferences and State meetings. She will make the keynote address at the Midwestern conference.

From Omaha Mrs. Fickel will go to Des Moines to attend a two-day State meeting. She will then go to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, on May 8, and will speak at the Indiana Women's Democratic Club in Terre Haute on May 11.

After the Indiana meeting she will go west again to Minnesota to aid in holding meetings in each of the congressional districts in the State.

Club Schedules Evening of Music

University Announces Final Event of Its Season.

The University Club will finish its season's entertainments Thursday evening with an "evening of music," featuring Earl Carbauh, barytone, assisted by Richard Lorleberg, violoncellist, and Dorothy Hoogs Bowman, pianist. Mr. Carbauh and Mr. Lorleberg will be assisted at the piano by Mrs. Carbauh and Mrs. Warren Grimes.

With the exception of Mrs. Bowman, all have appeared before the University Club previously, and their return is being received with much enthusiasm. Mrs. Bowman, a native of the Hawaiian Islands, has only recently come to Washington, where she is becoming increasingly popular in the music circles.

Members of the entertainment committee, in charge of the program, include Mr. Lewis Lofton Moneyway, chairman; Mr. James Oliver Murdock, Mr. Clifford K. Berryman, Mr. Richard F. Roper and Mr. Albert E. Stephen. Mr. Moneyway, on behalf of the board of governors, will act as host at a buffet supper for the guest artists at which Miss Marjorie Lowe will serve as his hostess.

Horace Atwood to Wed Margaret M. Maffitt

Mrs. James Strawbridge Maffitt, of Baltimore, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Margaret Montgomery Maffitt, to Mr. Horace Bailey Atwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bailey Atwood, of Front Royal, Va.

Miss Maffitt attended the Mary Baldwin Seminary at Staunton, Va., and was graduated from the Maryland College for Women at Lutherville.

Mr. Atwood attended the United States Naval Academy and the University of Maryland Law School. He is a member of the Merchants Club.

The date for the wedding has not been selected.

Mrs. F. C. Van Dusen has come here from Palm Beach, Fla., with Miss J. R. Allen, and during their visit of several days they are maintaining a suite at the Wardman Park.

New Shampoo Will Restore Hair's Luster

Soapless Treatment Revives Scalp Also; Canary Follies at D. C. Store.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IN THE SPRING, when the trees are blossoming and the poets are brimful of verse, there's nothing more incongruous than a lack-luster head of hair. It just won't do! New wardrobes, Easter bonnets and all one's season finery count for little, look like nothing, if the coiffure is dead and dull.

So, to arms, to arms, ladies, and brighten up those tresses, give them life and high lights, color and vitality! How? Well, one of the answers lies in a soapless shampoo which is guaranteed to make an old head of hair look like new!

No matter what type of hair you have—whether it's silky and fine, coarse, dry or oily—here's a shampoo that will do a spring renovation all in one job!

Not only does it give a new luster and softness to the hair, but it helps normalize the scalp and is an effectual treatment for falling hair and dandruff. It makes your permanent look more natural; or, if you're planning to have a permanent soon, it will get your hair in excellent condition for it.

There must be a reason why this shampoo can do so much. So there is! For one thing, it contains Davolene, a natural substance found in all healthy scalps. It contains no alkali and no alcohol—and no soap. It's simply a complete little cleanser all in itself, a splendid treatment for both hair and scalp.

It isn't high priced. You can buy a bottle of it for as little as 50 cents, or for as much as 89 cents.

See the Canary Follies.

Come one, come all! See the sensational show! See the Canary Follies of 1935! Seven all-star acts featuring the loveliest ladies of Canarydom! Watch them dance! Hear them sing! Golden songbirds. Rare old melodies. A complete show, free of charge! Bring your husband, bring your children—but leave the cat at home!

You'll marvel that birds can perform such stunts, show such unusual intelligence and be so altogether fascinating after you've seen the Canary Follies.

You'll join us in congratulating the local store which has brought this unique show to town.

Tonic Removes Facial Sheen.

No sooner does warm weather come along than our poor faces shine like mirrors. No matter how carefully we make up, one hour later sees our skin greasy and oily.

What can we do about it? One beauty expert, who has many times proved she knows the answers, tells us to use a certain liquid which is a combination skin tonic and astringent. It's soothing, cooling, and ever so refreshing! If you keep a bottle of it in your icebox you won't mind the hot weather half so much. And your face won't wear a hot weather look.

You should use this tonic each morning after you've cleansed your face, and it will brighten the skin, stimulate circulation and refine the pores, besides preventing that dreadful sheen. You'll find this little beauty saver in a downtown store, priced to meet all budgets.

Bargaining in Summer Suits.

Ask your husband if he remembers last summer when the sun just about melted the asphalt off the pavements? Ask him if he remembers shedding his coat and collar and trying to climb into the refrigerator? If he remembers offering to fry the eggs on the top of his head? Or dreaming that he's a cake of butter slowly beginning to melt?

P'raps he won't remember. Sometimes men don't. But anyway, you remind him that he said he'd no more go through the summer without a cool summer suit than he'd roast weiners in Devildom. And remind him that a certain downtown store is celebrating its seventeenth annual sale of men's hot-weather suits. There are tropical worsted, sporty tweeds, flannels, palm-tex fabric, and angora twists, in single and double breasted business suits, combination sport coat and flannel trousers, Norfolk style, shirred, yoke, and bi-swing backs. Dozens of styles and materials to choose from, and not one over $13.75.

Incidentally, there's no charge for alterations!

Inexpensive Atomizers.

Now that perfume is so popular—the stores say it's the season's best seller—it's only right that atomizers should be too. The perfume experts tell us there is no way to use perfume quite as satisfactorily as the atomizer way. Spraying the fragrance over your hair, around your neck, and on your arms, gives it a lightness, a loveliness that a mere drop here and there never would.

Of course, you've had the expense of the perfume so it isn't fair you should have to pay a lot more for your atomizer. And you won't if you buy one of the attractive 60-cent ones sold in a downtown store. These are combination glass and composition, with small silk knit covered bulbs. Ever so attractive!

The Drawstring Neckline Typical of Current Trend

Pattern No. 904.

THERE ARE ONLY eight pieces to this "Sew-Simple" pattern—naturally it is an easy problem for the amateur dressmaker. And yet, simple as it is, it is very smart. That drawstring neckline is one of the most important things that has happened to necklines this season, and is typical of the current trend toward shirred or gathered fullness. The little kimono sleeves are cool, and if you make this frock in a crisp cotton, you will feel and look fresh on the warmest summer day.

A large, clear instruction chart further simplifies this already very easy problem in sewing. The pattern comes in sizes 12 to 20, 30 to 38, and in size 16 (34) requires 3¼ yards of 35-inch material.

Grapefruit or Pineapple Juice Averts Discoloring of Bananas

By Dorothea Duncan.

MANY times the housewife finds herself up against a blank wall. Foods that must be eaten immediately after preparation are all right for the family, but when company is to be served and dinner a prolonged affair, the dishes that must be eaten immediately, if still to be attractive, are a problem. For this reason, bananas, which darken soon after cutting, are often excluded from the menu.

If you are planning to serve bananas, you won't have to wait until the last minute before serving, if you treat them with a sprinkling of fresh or canned grapefruit juice, canned pineapple juice, lemon or orange juice. One of these four juices will prevent discoloration of the fruit. If sugar and cream has been the only banana accompaniment that you have ever known, you will be delighted with the surprisingly good flavor of the banana when treated to a coating of one of the above fruit juices.

Juice Restores Banana.

Canned or fresh grapefruit juice and canned pineapple juice, not only keeps the banana from discoloring, but it works miracles at rejuvenating a sticky and discolored banana. An immersion of a leftover banana into one of these two juices will restore the banana to normal.

Q. Could you sugges an unusual meat sandwich spread that may be prepared in a hurry and will keep for some time in the refrigerator?

A. Buy a quarter of a pound of dried or chip beef and have the butcher put it through the meat grinder, using a fine blade. To this add a sprinkling of grated American cheese (the kind that comes already grated for macaroni and done up in cellophane) and enough thick tomato soup to make a paste with a good spreading consistency. This spread has a piquant flavor and will keep in sterile jars in the refrigerator for at least a week.

Q. Could you give me a recipe for a good coffee dessert that does not have to be frozen?

A. Try the following molded one:

Mocha Cream.

1 level tablespoon gelatin
1¼ cups milk
1¼ cups strong coffee
½ cup sugar
Dash of salt
3 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon vanilla

Soak gelatin in one-fourth cup of cold milk for five minutes. Mix remaining milk with coffee, sugar, salt and slightly beaten egg yolks. Cook in double boiler until custard coats spoon, stirring constantly. Add gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add flavoring and stir in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a wet mold and place in the refrigerator until firm. Serve garnished with whipped cream. Serves six.

Removing Onion Odor.

Q. How can one remove the odor of onions from the hands and from knives?

A. Rinse the hands or knives with cold water, but do not use soap until vinegar or lemon juice has been rubbed freely on the surface that has contacted the onion.

Q. Can you give me a recipe for an egg dish that may be quickly prepared and will be suitable for midnight suppers?

A. This recipe for Creole eggs should be just the thing.

Creole Eggs.

1 small onion chopped
1 tablespoon fat
½ cup canned tomato pulp
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
¼ cup sliced ripe olives
6 eggs, slightly beaten

Fry onion and green pepper in fat for three minutes. Add olives and tomato pulp. Cook until steaming hot. Add eggs and continue cooking until eggs are creamy, stirring constantly. Serves six.

Dorothea Duncan will be glad to help you with your culinary problems. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

Vitamin Family Increased to Six By New Discovery

Just as diet-conscious people are begininng to feel at home with vitamins A, B, C, D, and E, the scientists discover a brand new vitamin. K is the name given to the newest member of the family. It was discovered by two workers in the Biochemical Institute of Copenhagen University.

Both workers believe K will be valuable in the treatment of anemia. They learned that chickens fed on a special diet developed deficiency disease, leading to anemia. The disease was cured by a fat soluble vitamin found in hog liver, hemp seed, certain vegetables such as tomatoes and kale, and, to a lesser degree, in many cereals. This leads the scientists to believe these foodstuffs contain an essential vitamin. When it is absent deficiency disease sets in It is supposed the lack of vitamin K causes a decrease in the clotting and accelerating component in blood.

A Difficult Contract.

The true test of an expert player comes in the play when confronted with a dummy of less value than anticipated.

I admit in the following hand my raise was somewhat optimistic and was more than delighted with my partner's play of the hand below:

The Play.

East led the heart Queen, which Mrs. Culbertson was allowed to win with the King. She then led the club Ace and overtook the Queen with a King in the dummy. She led a diamond, winning with a finesse of the Queen when Sims played low, and led out the diamond Ace.

After next ruffing a small diamond in the dummy and a club in her hand, she returned another diamond to be trumped in the dummy. On this Mrs. Sims discarded her remaining club.

A small trump was led, Sims playing low, and declarer's Jack won the trick. The heart loser was returned, West winning it with the ten and returning the Ace. Mrs. Culbertson trumped this, led her trump Ace, and conceded a trick to Sims' spade King, fulfilling the contract with an extra trick.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

Newly crowned tennis champion of the Northwest, Ellen Mallory finds her triumph dulled by her fiance's insistence that she give up her career. Ellen refuses to do so, and Michael leaves her in tears.

BREAKFAST next day was not a happy meal. Ellen loved her brother, Bob, but he was so much younger, only 14, that it always seemed to Ellen that he did not belong to her family. One is very old at 22—and a 14-year-old brother young indeed.

He was still excited over the events of the day before.

"Gee, Ellen," Bob said, "I thought maybe you'd have spouted wings by morning. They said so many elegant things about you last night."

"Old home town girl made good, huh?" Ellen laughed. "Mom, have there been any telephone calls for me?"

"Kathleen called. Wants you to have lunch with her this noon. Said she'd stop at the office for you. I told her you would unless you phoned her that you couldn't. That O. K.?"

"Thanks, Mom. Any other calls?"

Ellen Was Disappointed.

There was a wistful catch in Ellen's voice. Her mother heard it and hoped to be forgiven when she answered. "Only the choir leader, wanting you to be sure to come to practice tonight."

"Oh." Ellen tried to hide her disappointment by attacking her breakfast almost as though she really wanted it.

"Aunt Ellen's coming home today." Mrs. Mallory changed the subject quickly. She wanted to forget, if she could, the memory of the young voice that had called early that morning.

She liked Michael Dale—as much as she could like any man who wanted to marry her girl. But she had told him that Ellen did not care to come to the telephone to talk and she had eased her conscience by remembering that this was the man who wanted Ellen to give up fame and maybe even wealth to marry him.

Life Seemed Sad.

"I'm glad Aunt Ellen's coming home. I miss her," Ellen said.

"Well, I'm glad, too. I tell you it isn't any fun sticking around home here day after day," Mrs. Mallory grumbled. "When your Aunt Ellen's here I get a little respite from cooking and washing dishes and ironing clothes. Maybe when you're famous, Ellen, we can hire a maid, have someone to do the heavy work for us."

"Maybe," Ellen said faintly, thinking down the years—without Mike. Growing rich and famous, maybe, but without Mike. Life, somehow, seemed not worth the living.

It was fun, though, to walk down to work and meet her friends. Queer, how many people one knows in a county seat city. Everyone she met knew of her success and everyone had a cordial word for her.

Everyone Praised Her.

Mr. Applequist, the banker and superintendent of the Sunday school, was quite jubilant.

"Of course, you'll go to the national, Ellen? We'll show Helen Wills and Molla Mallory and some of those other famous stars where to head in at. Give us another year and it'll be Ellen Mallory, tennis queen, and not Molla. Probably you'll be in the movies and everything."

"Maybe I'll not enter the national," Ellen ventured.

"Not enter the national?" his voice held incredulity. "Well, if I can persuade you to, you certainly will. You're going to honor Fairhaven. Why, if you'd win the national, Fairhaven would get as much publicity as if it had been the birthplace of a President. Goodness yes, you'll just have to enter the national. We're all expecting it."

Kathleen Came.

The loquacious man hurried on, chuckling. Of course, entering the national and having a champion wasn't nearly as important to Fairhaven as he'd made believe to Ellen, but just the same it was a nice speech and that pretty Mallory kid had really done herself proud.

At noon Kathleen was still bubbling over with enthusiasm, recalling Ellen's victory.

"I wish," Ellen said, feeling herself ungracious but determined, "I wish, Katie, that you wouldn't talk about the tournament any more. It seems to me that that's all I've heard all my life—and about the national, Katie, I don't want to seem ungrateful, but I'm sick of it. I want to forget."

Marriage Is Best.

Kathleen scrutinized her friend gravely. "You've quarreled with Michael—over tennis?"

Ellen nodded. Everybody would know it. Why evade Kathleen? Kathleen was not slow to speak her mind. "I tell you, Ellen, you've made a mistake. You'll regret it."

"You mean that, that I should give up my work and tennis and, and everything—just to marry Mike Dale?"

"I mean exactly that, Ellen Mallory, and don't you ever forget it. There isn't a girl in Fairhaven who wouldn't be glad to be in your shoes.

"Why, look at Marjie Hutton. Her heart's just in her eyes every time she sees you and Mike together. She's been in love with Michael Dale since they were school kids. Wouldn't she be glad to snap him up if you threw him overboard? Wouldn't she just?"

Just a Dunce.

"You think she could, Kate?" Ellen was perfectly serious about the question.

"Someone will, Ellen, if she doesn't; depend upon it. Mike's a wonderful fellow. He loves you, yes, but if you throw him overboard, well, Ellen, there are a lot of other girls and most any one of them would be glad enough to give up everything—if Mike Dale would smile seriously at her. Do you want me to tell you exactly what I think of you, Ellen?"

"You might as well, Kate. I know you intend to. And maybe—well, maybe I ought to hear."

"Well, then, Ellen Mallory, I think you're seven kinds of a dunce if you don't walk right over to the telephone booth and ask Mike to come and see you right now and make up."

"I'm going to do it," Ellen heard herself telling Kate. But a cold presentiment tugged at her heart as she dialed the number. What if Michael would not care to come?"

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Briton's Pay for Health.

England spends almost twice as much as the United States on health. Recent figures show that while the United States on an average spends $60,000,000 on health services, England spends $110,000,000.

Children Had Slim Chance In Last Year's Legislation

Laws Against Kidnaping and Dance Marathons Most Popular Form of State Action; Only Nine Legislatures Met.

CHILDREN throughout the United States had mighty little attention focused on their problems in 1934. This is proved by a review of laws put through in the year by the nine States of which Legislatures held regular sessions. The review has been compiled by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

Most popular legislation had to do with kidnaping. Six of the nine States—Massachusetts, Ohio, South Carolina, Virginia, Washington and West Virginia—passed laws increasing penalties for this offense.

New Jersey adopted legislation which prohibits issuance of birth certificates revealing illegitimacy. Kentucky passed a law providing that in certain instances after an adopted child has reached the age of 17 the adoption may be annulled on consent of all parties involved.

Iowa Bars "Marathons."

Iowa has decided that no more of its sons and daughters shall take part in "marathons," "walkathons" or any other kind of "thons." Laws to that effect were passed. Maine also is frowning on this dubious form of competition but its legislation is less stringent than Iowa's. The Maine law prohibits "marathons," walkathons," and so on except on favorable vote of the city or town in which they are to be held.

Formerly boys and girls under 16 in Wisconsin were not permitted to attend public dances unaccompanied. Now the age limit has been raised to 17.

Attempts to raise minimum age for full-time employment from 14 to 15 or to the code age of 16 failed in Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island.

Kentucky raised the educational requirement for children leaving school to go to work from completion of the fifth grade to completion of the eighth grade if the child is 14 and to completion of the seventh grade if the child is 15 years old.

Fixes Minimum Wage.

Massachusetts provided double compensation for minors injured while illegally employed and enacted a new mandatory minimum wage law.

Henceforth the Department of Labor in New York State will have control over industrial home work in single-family and two-family dwellings in cities of 200,000 or more population. Formerly the department had jurisdiction only when the work was done in tenement houses of three or more families.

None of the nine States made much provision for dependent children. In Virginia the State will henceforth contribute to the financing of mothers' aid administration to the extent of one-half county expenditures. Formerly the State matched one-third of county expenditures.

Virginia also abolished its independent juvenile and domestic relations courts. They are now branches of trial justices' courts and are mandatory in every county.

Voters League Will Discuss Merit System

Delegates From 38 States to Attend Meeting May 7 to 10.

THE GREAT NEED for establishment of trained non-political, permanent personnel in public service, and early elimination of the spoils system of appointments, if competent, sound Government administration is to prevail, are to be keynote discussions of the general council meeting of the National League of Women Voters in Washington, May 7 to 10. League members from 38 States, led by Miss Marguerite M. Wells, of Minneapolis, president, will attend.

Two United States Senators, Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, will speak at a public dinner Wednesday, May 8. Both Senators are sponsors of pending legislation to extend the merit system to positions in the Federal service and are recognized as exponents of the new demand for higher standards in public service. They will discuss "Can the Parties Live Without Patronage?"

League delegates will hear more of the political patronage problem, as it affects all Government services, in addresses by Prof. Harold Lasswell, University of Chicago, and Louis Brownlow, director of the Public Administration Clearing House. As an authority on the making of public opinion, Laswell has been asked to tell whether "the attitude of 50,000,000 people" can be changed about patronage and the theory that "to the victor belongs the spoils." Brownlow has made a special study of the personnel problem, particularly in the field of municipal government.

Further evidence of the league's special interest in administration of the personnel system is a planned visit by the delegate body to the United States Civil Service Commission on Thursday, May 9. The league's special campaign committee in behalf of "public service as a career," of which Mrs. George Gellhorn, of St. Louis, is chairman, will present a plan for league activities.

Other council high lights will include an address on taxation by Simeon E. Leland, University of Chicago, and a member of the Illinois State Tax Commission, with discussion led by Mrs. Walter Greenough, of Indianpolis; a legislative report by Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, of Washington, legislative chairman, and selection in major measures for league work in the coming year. Delegates will be received by Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt the afternoon of May 7, and there will be a reception in honor of distinguished women officials and members of the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters.

To Present Greek Tragedy.

AN AUTHENTIC modernized version of the Greek tragedy, "Medea," by Euripides, will be presented by the dramatic department of Columbia University tonight in the Roosevelt auditorium. The performance will be sponsored by the English department of Wilson Teachers College, under direction of Dr. M. Margaret Stroh.

Francis Bosworth, formerly drama critic for the National Broadcasting Co. and now head of the drama department of the New College of Columbia University, will direct the play. Settings and costumes were designed by Victor Edmund Jacoby, formerly of the Yale School of the Drama, and the dances were created and staged by Mary Jo Shelley, director of the Bennington School of the Dance.

Students of the Wilson Teachers College have made all arrangements for the performance. Committee chairman are Miss Kathleen Crowley, Miss Helen Williamson, Orson Trueworthy, Sam Lubin and Miss Anne Alden Morrison.

Alliance Plans Festival.

THE WOMEN'S ALLIANCE of All Souls Unitarian Church will give a bridge luncheon and spring festival Wednesday afternoon at the church in honor of its newly elected president, Mrs. Eugene F. Mueller.

Following the luncheon a program including songs by Norma Simonson, accompanied by Dorothy Radde Emery; a dramatic reading by May Jameson Bryant with organ accompaniment by Lewis C. Atwater, and costume dances by Georgia Grisso, Emma Frances Luckett and Barbara Ann Davis will be presented.

The committee in charge, headed by Mrs. Laurence C. Staples, consists of Mrs. Clyde Wendelken, Mrs. Haworth Eaton, Mrs. McFall Kerbey, Mrs. Fred Hingsburg, Mrs. Lowell Parker, Mrs. Howard Hosmer and Mrs. William E. Bryant.

In honor of retiring and incoming officers, board members and chairmen, the Sisterhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation will hold its annual luncheon at 12:30 o'clock today at the Broadmoor.

Following the luncheon a board meeting will be held.

Reservations for the anniversary observance dinner of the Women's International League, Thursday, at the Willard Hotel, honoring Jane Addams' seventy-fifth birthday, are open alike to nonmembers and members of the league, as long as space is available. League headquarters are at 532 Seventeenth street northwest.

4-Year-Old Girl Gives London Violin Recitals

A 4-year-old girl is composing music and giving violin recitals in London although she has had a violin less than a year. Her name is Tessa Woolfstein. One day, when she was only three years old, she accompanied her elder sister and mother to the Modern School of Music. The older girl planned to study cello. While at the school a teacher handed a small violin to Tessa and showed her how to hold it. The child immediately began to draw a straight bow across the strings. She seems never to tire of practicing.

Gleanings from Current Verse

Selected by Hope Ridings Miller.

Companioned.

WOMEN ARE bound by deep unbroken ties
In all their length of ages on the earth,
A cord not cut and knotted at a birth,
A quickening pulse which death and doom defies.
Love's sweet and secret, fervent mystery,
Is never shared by women with her lover,
Some ancient plaint, out of a book's dim cover,
Speaks more to her of her heart's history.

In the high moments of her life, she goes
Companioned by the beautiful, the brave,
Wearing the fate of Helen for a rose,
Yearning with Iseult over the dark wave,
Watching the slow bright-petaled moments fall,
Within Francesca's close, Italian wall.

Before Penelope's unfinished loom
She sits to wait, so does not wait forsaken.
Or in the path an earthquake war has taken,
Mourns with a Trojan queen her ravished tomb.
And when the hour strikes that sees her lie
Borne down to earth by her triumphant pain,
She hears the shepherds whispering again
And sees a new star in the darkened sky.

No woman walks her way of life alone,
A foot has marked the path that she must tread,
Picking her way from sharpened stone to stone,
Or on soft grass the spring has carpeted.
Her laughter on the echoing air is blown,
And when she weeps she shall be comforted.

Nor hint that teeming dark shaped to our size
Stooped when we tried to rise . . .

I dreamed I picked a flower from the dew.

These Things Come Back.

THESE THINGS come back as laughter can come leaping
Out of long loneliness, as yellow flowers
Have burst ten thousand springs from a winter's sleeping
These things of ours . . .

The winding road, the purple fields, the willows
Turning their slender leaves by the wandering stream,
The wide, high sky, the clouds like languorous billows,
The ephemeral dream . . .

The dear dead words, soberly, softly spoken,
The wind in the trees, in the grass, as small as a sigh,
The cricket's hidden song, incredibly broken,
The swallow's cry . . .

These things come back as summer must forever
Quicken the bitter earth with its bright, swift flame,
Gilding the hills, warming the heart, yet never,
Never the same.

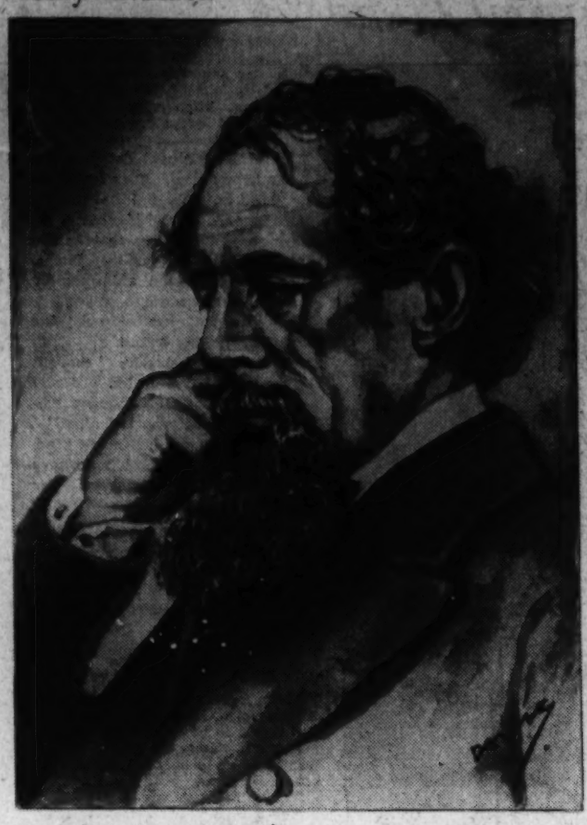
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Pierce Butler—Fanny Kemble.



Fanny Kemble, famous English actress, who is shown above with her literary friend, Charles Dickens, found romance in her theatrical tour of America, when she met Pierce Butler, Georgia plantation owner. She married Butler after a tempestuous courtship. The two later separated and Fanny returned to the stage.

Niece of Sarah Siddons Won Fame on Stage on Two Continents.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

AMERICANS of yesterday recall Fanny Kemble, as this fair daughter of Thespia, friend of Dickens, Tennyson and other artistic and literary celebrities, who found dramatic fame on two continents and romance on this one.

High in the firmament of the nineteenth century histrionic stars shone that of Fanny Kemble, niece of the noted Sarah Siddons, tragedienne extraordinary. Her parents were versatile Charles Kemble, romantic actor, one of the famed Kemble clan who had adorned the English stage for several generations, and Maria Theresa de Camp, a Viennese, daughter of a French officer.

With such a heritage it is small wonder that Frances Ann Kemble, always "Fanny" to family and friends, born on November 27, 1809, knew the fantastic world of the footlights almost from her babyhood. She was only 5 years old when she sat on her father's knee and saw her celebrated aunt, Mrs. Sarah Siddons, receive a torrent of applause in Covent Garden Theater. It was the first and last time Fanny saw Mrs. Siddons perform, but she never forgot the incident.

When she was 12 a change came. She was taken to Paris for a long training in languages and the arts in a girls school. In a school play Fanny made such a hit as Hermione that she was applauded to the echo.

Poetry Her Favorite Study.

When Fanny Kemble was 16 she returned to England, an educated young lady. Poetry was her favorite study then and she knew most of the great poets by heart, a fine training for her later career. Her first dramatic venture was as a playright, a full length five-act play on which the Covent Garden Theater had made her a tentative offer of 200 pounds, her father adding a promise of 50 pounds more if it were a success.

Fanny met and admired Alfred Tennyson. "He was our hero," she once wrote, "the great hero of our day." Edward Fitzgerald, William Makepeace Thackeray and Tennyson's friend, Arthur Hallam, were visitors at the Kemble home. All this time the young woman was making her mind as to whether or not she would go on the stage. Reversals in the family fortunes brought about her final decision. She made her debut in "Juliet" in 1829 and all London went wild over her. The gold watch her father gave her she nicknamed "Romeo."

Later she sat for her portrait to Sir Thomas Lawrence, the renowned portrait painter. A close friendship grew up between them that might even have blossomed into romance despite the disparity in their ages except for his death suddenly before he had painted his planned full-length portrait of her as "Juliet" in 1830.

Friend of Dickens.

Another notable friend, especially in after years, was Charles Dickens. He had great admiration for her genius and she for his. Still another attachment was to Mendelssohn, the composer. In March, 1832, her play "Francis the First" was produced. It was a success, but did not save her father's theatrical fortunes. Things grew steadily worse and Charles Kemble's eyes began to turn to America, the land of El Dorado.

In 1832, the theatrical soldiers of fortune sailed for the United States.

New York society of the day received the famous English actors with much cordiality. On September 18, 1932, Fanny Kemble made her first American appearance as "Bianca" in "Fazio," at the Park Theater. The New York Mirror next day pronounced her "the finest female genius the stage this day has to offer." Then New York took Miss Kemble to its heart. The next step was to Philadelphia, where the New York success was repeated. In the audience that greeted her there and paid her compliments at soirees after the play was a young man named Pierce Butler, of good family. When she returned to New York he was there to applaud her as she smiled to her audience.

Butler, wealthy, educated and of charming manners, was soon her most favored admirer. They talked of art and music by the hour. He played to her on the flute and she confided to him her hopes and plans for the future.

Notables Attend Performance.

At first, no doubt, she did not dream of casting aside her career to be mistress of Butler's many Southern plantations. She went on with her circuit of American cities, Washington being among those she visited. At her performances were ex-President John Quincy Adams, Chief Justice John Marshall, Dolly Madison—all the names that made the news of that day. She was presented to President Andrew Jackson in the White House and visited the Senate escorted by Edward Everett to hear Daniel Webster in one of his happiest oratorical moods. So enamoured did Mr. Butler become that he actually got a place in the orchestra of the theater where Miss Kemble played in New York. Wherever she traveled with the play there he was. Is it any wonder that at last his devotion began to win its reward?

In Boston their engagement was announced and all America rang with the news!

It is amusing in these days to read that in certain exclusive circles Pierce Butler's alliance with an actress was not greeted with acclaim. Actresses did not enjoy the social prestige that is theirs today. Fanny Kemble, if she knew of this, cared nothing about it.

All Philadelphia journeyed to old Christ Church on June 7, 1834 to see the venerable Bishop William White unite in matrimony Miss Kemble and Mr. Butler. Two weeks later she made her professional farewell at the Chestnut Street Theater in "The Wedding Day." The bridegroom played the flute in the orchestra as usual and then answered the wild and ceaseless curtain calls with his bride.

They were not altogether happy in their marriage. In 1836, with her baby daughter, Fanny went home to London on a holiday and her husband plunged into politics to do his part to elect Martin Van Buren President.

Moved to Georgia Plantation.

London received Mrs. Butler and her baby cordially. In July Butler arrived, and after some happier months in Europe they returned to America. Finally they went to live on Mr. Butler's plantations in Georgia. This was an entirely new life to the English girl, who was an abolitionist at heart and now had to witness slavery. Her journal, later to be published, recorded her emotions. More children came to them, more trips to Europe, and still misunderstanding grew between them. In 1843 they sailed for the United States once more. Finally, in 1845, the break came. They were separated and he took the children. She returned to London, where Charles Kemble tried vainly to patch up their quarrels.

Wealthy American Finally Divorced Her After Estrangement.

In 1847 she returned to the stage. Happiness came once more and, although she longed for her children, her joy in acting overshadowed even that grief. The news came that her husband was suing her in the Philadelphia courts for divorce on a charge of abandonment. In 1848 she returned to fight the suit, and it became one of America's most celebrated divorce cases. After months of delay and defense, for her children's sakes and for their security, Mrs. Butler consented to withdraw her defense, and Butler received a divorce.

When her children grew to maturity they spent much time with her. The oldest one, Sarah, married Dr. Owen Jones Wister, of Philadelphia. They were the parents of Owen Wister, the author.

In 1867 word came to her that Butler had died on his Southern plantation.

Expectant Father Wonders Why Wife's Women Friends Take Such Pessimistic View of Motherhood and Regale Her With Dismal Tales.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Will you please tell me why women can be so catty when the question of approaching motherhood is concerned?

* * * *

We expect a new baby soon. I have grown quite disgusted listening to the tragic tales the women visitors tell my wife, supposedly connected with childbirth cases. And I'm fed up with the whispering campaign, which goes: "Isn't it awful about Mrs. X? You know she——." Am I to believe the average woman prefers the risk of an abortion to the joys of motherhood?

We wanted another baby. We hope to have one. Our joy is the other woman's worry. Why?

EXPECTANT FATHER.

Rebellion Against Nature.

DEAR EXPECTANT FATHER: I suppose it's women's subconscious resentment of nature's heavy assessment against their sex which moves them to make spiteful remarks at the spectacle of imminent motherhood. That would explain their group consternation at the predicament of Mrs. X; their dismayed recollection of the horrific suffering entailed when the human race reproduces after its kind, wouldn't it?

* * * *

However, it becomes rather more difficult to analyze the reasons why women might do the thing you tell about—cruelly visit their tactless commiseration upon an expectant mother, or conjure up before her helpless imagination visions of women tortured and destroyed by the ordeal of childbirth. Perhaps, in blind, unreasoning, cowardly rebellion against their inexorably fixed natural function, certain women qualified for but resistant to motherhood hope by these subversive tactics to incite other women to join them in their futile insurrection against life.

* * * *

For my part, I can imagine the spectacle of approaching motherhood—however unwisely invited—rousing, at worst, in another woman's breast only such emotions as tenderest pity for the woman concerned; a protective sympathy so vital and enveloping that it would spend itself in giving courage and hope and a bright belief in the physical and spiritual majesty of her undertaking.

* * * *

I may be hopelessly old-fashioned in this regard, but in my opinion motherhood, under favorable circumstances, still offers for the majority of women their greatest opportunity for passing from the circumscribed orbit of bored selfish existence into a limitless sphere of active, joyous living.

* * * *

And I am equally of the opinion that even as it is not within the province of the women who elects motherhood to condemn those others who eschew it, neither is it within the province of the deliberately or involuntarily childless to extend gratuitously the crown of martyrdom to women who cooperate in populating the earth.

What TODAY Means

"Taurus."

IF APRIL 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m., and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m., and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

Your disposition may have a great effect upon your day, and the final results, so avoid letting anything ruffle it. Today should be auspicious for planning future business or social activities, or the negotiating of financial matters.

Expectations regarding business affairs are likely to be realized this week, if the right amount of effort is put forth. Friendly gatherings are in danger of terminating in an unfriendly fashion, if undignified conduct or undue boisterousness is indulged in. Some of your friends' feelings probably will be supersensitive, so in your social contacts it will pay to be tactful.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those matrimonially inclined, will display good judgment to watch their steps, for should they tred on one another's toes, an explosion of anger is apt to follow.

If a woman and April 29 is your birthday, the quicker you learn not to jump to hasty conclusions, or to take snap judgment, the more mistakes you will avoid. You will be much happier if you do not harbor any feeling of resentment, after a misunderstanding, which has supposedly been thrashed out.

You should be quick at figures, so most efficient in either household or office management. You may possess a great deal of originality, as well as creative ability. In social life your popularity should make you capable of assuming a leading part in club or organization activities, if you will but exert yourself to display the proper amount of interest.

The type of work which is likely to interest you is: Interior decorating, sketching, designing, lecturing, bookkeeping, teaching, and writing fiction.

If a man and April 29 is your natal day, you have an almost uncanny ability to solve complicated problems, which should serve you well, and be instrumental in your making a big success. Mechanical engineering, architecture, public accountancy, statistical work, or scientific research, are among the lines of activity through which your best results may come.

The child born on April 29, when it reaches its teens may show evidence of having an exaggerated sense of its own importance. Common sense reasoning, as well as tactful criticism, is likely to be all that is needed to overcome this tendency.

Asthma an Evil Of Mankind for Many Centuries

Sir John Floyer Published Famous Essay on Ailment in 1698.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

ASTHMA, for many centuries, has been recognized as a distressing ailment, and as early as 1698 Sir John Floyer, a confirmed sufferer from this disease, published what is now a famous essay on the condition.

The word "allergy" means "other energy," and since Goodale in 1916 suggested a method for detecting protein sensitivity, the term has been applied to abnormal body reactions due to the absorption of proteins. Asthma, hay fever, eczema and many skin manifestations are included.

Allergy is characterized by an unusual susceptibility to a substance harmless to most people.

The phenomenon is often attended with a galaxy of symptoms. Absorption via the air passages is, in many instances, responsible for conjunctivitis, hay fever and bronchial asthma. If the offending protein is taken in through the digestive tract there may be ulcers in the mouth, vomiting, diarrhea or vague abdominal pain. Protein that enters the body through the skin brings on itching, hives, eczema, or dermatitis.

In about 1 per cent of the cases of asthma foods are responsible. The identification of the offending protein is often difficult and it may be necessary to starve the patient mildly before the particular substance can be found. Only a few simple foods should be given at first. If after several days there are no symptoms other foods may be added one at a time. In this way the offender can usually be discovered.

Testing the skin for a reaction by the injection of a series of protein extracts or the use of the so-called patch test will frequently serve to determine the irritating protein.

Once the cause is found the treatment, in many cases, consists only of not using a certain food or foods, or in avoiding contact with particular proteins such as animal hair, feathers, silk, pollen of flowers and weeds, etc. In others, however, it is necessary to desensitize by means of a vaccine prepared from the poisonous protein.

Ninety-nine per cent of the population can eat all forms of protein without exhibiting signs of sensitivity, and the remaining 1 per cent are not sensitive to all proteins. While the problem is most annoying to sensitized individuals, it is not in any sense a hopeless one.

INDIANS OF THE SOUTHWEST

By Miss Mary Tucker.

Of all the Indian tribes of the United States those of the far Southwest have been least affected by the irresistible march of civilization. Their lives remain, in many ways, exceedingly primitive. It is the purpose of the annual ceremonial held in Gallup, N. M., to preserve from oblivion all that is most beautiful and impressive in the spiritual and ethical lives of these tribes. Miss Tucker describes the Corn Dance, Snake Dance, Turtle Dance, the Night Chant and the Mountain Chant . . . and other ceremonies old beyond record.

Throngs See First Blooms Of Orchards

Thousands of Visitors Expected at Fete in Shenandoah.

Festive Spirit Reigns for Apple Carnival Opening Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

Winchester, Va., April 28.—Apple orchards the length and breadth of the Shenandoah and Cumberland Valleys of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania were bursting into bloom this week-end as committees under the guidance of Fred A. Read, jr., director-general, whipped into form their arrangements for the twelfth annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival Thursday and Friday.

Orchards containing early varieties already are in bloom. The late bearers are showing "pink," which will burst into full bloom, it was estimated, by Wednesday. Normally the blossoms remains on the trees about five days.

Thousands in Virginia.

Already, thousands of visitors who have been in Virginia for "Historic Garden Week" are concluding their tours of old estates with side trips to the orchards of the Shenandoah Valley. There are about 12,000,000 apple trees in the orchards of the fruit belt known as the "Blue Ridge Country."

Festival week calls for an almost endless round of entertaining, and all sets of society were making preparations for keeping open house. Luncheons, dinners and suppers usually follow in quick succession. It also will be an occasion for many family runions.

Mlle. Nella Veverka, who will be crowned as "Queen Shenandoah XII" at 3 p. m. Thursday, is expected to arrive from Washington early Wednesday evening, with her brother, Ferdinand Veverka, jr., as official escort, and escorted also by a dozen State motorcycle police. She will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Hunter H. McGuire.

The 33 princesses representing colleges of Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia, also arriving Wednesday, will be quartered at the Southern Inn. A tea dance will be given for them after the coronation at the Winchester Golf Club.

Homes Decorated.

As orchards burst into bloom on the hills on either side of Winchester, a large corps of professional decorators plastered the fronts of business district buildings with the festival colors of green, pink and white in the form of flags, banners, bunting and festoons, with the Stars and Stripes forming centerpieces for many decorative schemes.

City authorities, catching the festival spirit, were doing their spring cleaning, even to the extent of resurfacing principal streets, which are also to be well sprinkled. Citizens were brightening up fronts with fresh paint, lawns and shrubs were trimmed in a sort of friendly rivalry to look pretty, and the Eastern "apple capital" was getting primped and beautified for its days and nights of festivities that have come in recent years to rival in magnitude and splendor several of the older regional fiestas.

U.S. Aid Lacking State to Close Rural Schools

Three-Fourths of Virginia Institutions Involved, Chief Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 28.—Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, said here tonight that expected Federal funds had not been received by Virginia and that by the end of next week three-fourths of the State's rural public schools would be closed.

One half, Dr. Hall said, would end their terms the first part of the week.

The money was to have been used to permit a nine-month school term, 30 days longer than the minimum allowed by State educational laws. The short term will not affect city schools which are paid for by the cities themselves.

Annulment Suit Says Wedding Was Forced

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., April 28.—Alleging that she married Howard M. Sprenkle, of Monterey, Pa., because he threatened her life, Mrs. Melvin Mae Sprenkle, of near Finksburg, Carroll County, has filed suit in Circuit Court here for annulment of the marriage.

The couple were wed at Hagerstown, January 19, 1934, and Mrs. Sprenkle alleges she left her husband ten days after the ceremony. Before her marriage Mrs. Sprenkle, 20 years old, was Miss Melvin Mae Gore.

G. O. P. Women Meet At Annapolis Today

Annapolis, April 28 (AP).—The Federation of Republican Women of Maryland will hold a one-day convention here tomorrow. Gov. and Mrs. Harry W. Nice are expected to be guests of honor.

The session will be led by Mrs. Lulu Powell, State chairman of the federation.

Essex School Given Funds.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Tappahannock, Va., April 28.—Essex County has been allotted $902.84 from the State Legislature's general appropriation for schools, for the remainder of the session, Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, has announced. Essex County schools will complete full nine months' term, closing the last of May.

Quesenberry's Murder Trial To Open Today

42 Witnesses Called by Prosecutor in Death of Corpl. McClary.

By the Associated Press.

Leesburg, Va., April 28.—"One-Eyed Tom" Quesenberry, sure-shooting mountain moonshiner, will go on trial here tomorrow for the murder of Corpl. C. J. McClary, Alexandria policeman. McClary, a volunteer member of a Federal-State posse, was fatally wounded on March 17 during a raid on a moonshine still near here.

Commonwealth's Attorney John Galleher, who said several days ago that he would ask the death penalty, announced that he would summon 42 witnesses, among them George Kirkpatrick, wounded in a raid the day before the shooting of McClary.

Stilson H. Hall and Lucas Phillips, appointed by the court to defend Quesenberry, were in conference tonight but declined to reveal the defense they planned.

Forty men have been called for jury duty in the trial, which Galleher said he expected would last about three days.

McClary was shot down by a distant rifleman as he led the party of officers in a rush on the hidden whisky plant. Airplanes, radio trucks and expert snipers armed with high velocity rifles were called into service in a widespread hunt for his assailant. Approximately 24 hours later State police captured Quesenberry asleep in a mountain gulley. The dog, on which he relied for an alarm should the possemen come close, had betrayed his position by barking.

In jail here he readily admitted several killings and defended his action in firing on the police by saying "they were pressing me close and shooting at me. I never shot at anybody who wasn't shooting at me."

Man Given Jail Term In Clubbing of Dog

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 28.—George Chaney was sentenced to 15 days in jail today on charges growing out of the clubbing of a dog of Frank McDonald. The animal was hurt so badly it had to be killed later. Chaney told Magistrate Richard Sweeney the dog was after his chickens.

Foreign Aids Will Watch Battle Scene

Military Uniforms of Other Lands to Be Seen Thursday.

Chancellorsville Event to Attract Crowds to Fredericksburg.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 28.—Every major power in the world except Japan and Russia will be represented when the Virginia Military Institute Cadets and United States Marines reenact the battle of Chancellorsville Thursday in the battlefield near Fredericksburg.

Invitations have been issued and Adj. Gen. S. G. Waller has named Col. Leroy Hodges, managing director of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, to act as Virginia host to the visitors.

Those who have accepted, Col. Hodges said today, include Col. W. W. Torr, D. S. C., M. C., and military attache of the British embassy; Group Capt. G. R. M. Reid, D. S. O., M. C., air attache of the same embassy; Lieut. Col. Vincenzo Coppola, air and military attache, Italian embassy; Brig. Gen. Juan F. Azcarate Pino, military attache, Mexican embassy; Lieut. Col. Emmanuel Lombard, military attache, and Maj. Norbent Champsaur, air attache, French embassy; Lieut. Col. Frederich Von Boetticher, military attache, German embassy, and Col. Tsi-Ming Chow, military attache, Chinese embassy.

It is believed probable that the representatives of the Japanese and the U. S. S. R. embassies may join the party.

The celebration at Chancellorsville is the 72nd. anniversary of the battle and will be featured by a re-enactment of the engagement and a narrative address by Dr. Douglas S. Freeman of Richmond.

More Eyewitnesses Invited to 'Battle'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 28.—Two additional eye-witnesses of the Chancellorsville battle, one of who fought there 72 years ago, have been located and will be special guests of the Battlefield Park Association at the celebration.

The veteran is W. J. Rogers, 90-year-old King George County citizen, who was a member of Stuart's Cavalry. The other eye-witness of the battle is Mrs. Belle Hawkins Faulkner, of Fredericksburg, who was a resident in the Chancellorsville section during the battle.

Official Washington will turn out in full force to witness a re-enactment of the battle.

Cabinet officers, congressional committees, representatives of the White House and other high Government officials have already signified their intention of being present.

Governors Invited.

In addition, Gov. Peery of Virginia has also invited Governors of nearby States to attend this dramatic and picturesque presentation.

The re-enactment is one of the contributions toward "1935—A National Park Year," sponsored by the National Park Service of the Interior Department.

A regiment of 800 marines from the fleet force at Quantico, in command of Col. Charles F. B. Price, two troops of cavalry from Fort Myer, Va., and 600 cadets from the Virginia Military Institute will participate.

Confederate Veteran To See Reenactment

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 28.—L. Wesley Cox, one of the few surviving Confederate veterans of this section, is planning to go to Fredericksburg Thursday to view the re-enactment of the battle of Chancellorsville.

Mr. Cox participated in the battle as a member of Carrington's Battery, under the late R. Herndon Fife, of Charlottesville. He will be accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. E. H. McPherson. He is in his ninetieth year.

Tour of Homes Planned.

Liquor Trial of 23 To Resume Today

Tax Evading Ring Alleged in Franklin County.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., April 28.—With nearly nine-tenths of the witnesses summoned by the Government in an alleged Franklin County liquor conspiracy yet to tell a Federal jury here what they know, principals in the case reassembled tonight for the second week of the trial.

Nineteen witnesses were paraded before the court during the first week, the Government prodding them for testimony to be used as the foundation for its charges that the 23 defendants conspired to evade Internal Revenue Department taxes on liquor both before and after repeal.

Before attempting to prove that the 23 were guilty of participation in the alleged conspiracy, the Government exacted pleas of guilty from four individuals and seven others and a corporation entered pleas of nollo contendere, informing the court that they would not offer any defense.

Aid Workers Will Gather At Frederick

State Conference Opens Today; Expected to Draw 450.

Lewis, Ulman, Greenstein Head Long List of Speakers.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., April 28.—Four hundred and fifty social workers from various cities in the State are expected to attend the Maryland State Conference of Social Workers opening at the Francis Scott Key Hotel here tomorrow.

The list of speakers is headed by Representative David U. Lewis, Judge Joseph N. Ulman, of Baltimore; State Relief Administrator Harry Greenstein, Miss Margaret E. Rich, assistant general director of the Family Welfare Association of America, and Ray L. Huff, executive of the United States Board of Parole.

A group of 100 Federal emergency relief workers from Baltimore is expected to arrive late tomorrow to participate in the session which will include lectures by welfare authorities and outstanding social workers, and round table discussions.

Judge Ulman to Talk.

The convention will continue until Tuesday evening.

Dr. Joseph H. Apple, president emeritus of Hood College, will preside at luncheon on the opening day. Miss Rich will deliver an address on "The Philosophy of Social Work."

In the afternoon, roundtable groups will be addressed by speakers in different fields of social welfare.

Judge Ulman, of Baltimore City Court, will speak at a dinner tomorrow night. His subject will be "probation and parole." Relief Administrator Greenstein will preside. Representative Lewis' topic at the same session is "the Federal Security program."

Dr. George H. Preston, State commissioner of mental hygiene, will preside at a luncheon Tuesday at which the principal speaker will be Miss Edith Abbott, dean of the School of Social Service, Chicago University.

Tuesday afternoon, Miss Anita J. Faatz, director of social service, Board of State Aid and Charities, will conduct discussion with a theme announced as "responsibility of the executive secretary to the county welfare board."

Lewis R. Dertzbaugh, chairman of the Frederick County Welfare Board, is head of a committee sponsoring the meeting.

Danville Stages 'Numbers' Raid

Two Men Held as Police Find $6,000 in Silver.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., April 28.—Police today were at grips with the "numbers" racket. Acting on a tip last night half a dozen officers swept down on the home of Charles H. Fox and found clerks in the basement counting out $6,000, mostly in silver.

Fox and Vance Bassinger were arrested on charges of operating a lottery.

A truck load of paraphernalia, including carbon order books, typewriters and adding machines, was taken away. Fox and Bassinger gave $1,000 bond for appearance Wednesday.

Salisbury, Md., April 28.—Hundreds of Rotarians from Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and District of Columbia gathered here today for the annual thirty-fourth district conference of Rotary International. Reservations had been made for approximately 600 and the number will be greatly increased by the Eastern Shore Club members, who will commute during the three-day session.

The program today was confined to registration, informal receptions by the Salisbury club, recreation and sports, and a sacred concert by the Treble Clef Choral Club of the Wicomico Women's Club, which for the past three years has taken first place in the competition conducted by the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs.

Tomorrow morning's program will include an address by Charles E. Hunt, St. Johns, Newfoundland, director of Rotary International, with other places allotted on the program to the district governor, J. Milton Patterson, Cumberland; Howard Witwer, Lancaster, Pa.; Harrison E. Howe, Washington; Ritchie Lawrie, jr., Harrisburg, Pa.

John W. Studebaker, U. S. Commissioner of Education, will be the luncheon speaker. The afternoon session will be devoted to group discussions led by Roy Danzer, Hagerstown; Ignatius Bjorlee, Frederick J. Forney Young, Hagerstown, Clarence E. Robertson, Pocomoke; Howard Stewart, Clearfidel, Pa.; Ralph Cummings, Lancaster, Pa.; Julius D. Knight, Baltimore; Walter Hitchler, Carlyle, Pa.; A. W. E. Horn, Washington; George Harris, Washington.

The annual conference dinner and ball, principal social feature of the conference, will be held in the evening.

Card parties, trips to historic points, inspection of gardens and sports have been arranged for Rotary Anns tomorrow.

Governor Acts Today on More Maryland Bills

Nice Declines to Reveal Measures or What Fate Awaits Them.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 28.—Gov. Harry W. Nice, somewhat refreshed despite a strenuous week, announced tonight he will take final action tomorrow on a number of additional bills passed at the recent session of the General Assembly. He would not, however, reveal the measures listed for approval or veto.

In the meantime, the Governor remained steadfast to his statement of a few days ago that, because of the many bills awaiting consideration, coupled with the perplexing questions arising daily, it would be two weeks or longer, before he would be able to clear his calendar of the legislative enactments.

The Governor also is finding heavy demands on his time in connection with appointments to State offices.

Gov. Nice said his decision as to the appointment of an associate justice of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, to fill the vacancy created by the death of Judge Nicholas H. Green, would not be made for several days. It is generally believed that he will name a Republican to the post, notwithstanding persistent urging of friends of State Senator Ridgely P. Melvin, and Attorney Eugene P. Childs, of Annapolis, Democratic aspirants for the berth. Observers say that former Representative Linwood L. Clark, who represented the second district but who has lived near Annapolis for several years, is slated for the bench.

Virginia Education Unit Hears Dr. Sidney Hall

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Tappahannock, Va., April 28.—Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, addressed a meeting of District A, Virginia Education Association, here Friday. Several hundred teachers from Northumberland, Lancaster, Richmond, Westmoreland, King George, Stafford, Essex, Caroline, Spotsylvania and the city of Fredericksburg attended the meeting. Capt. John E. Martin, president of the Virginia Education Association, and Forbes H. Norris, assistant superintendent of the Richmond city schools, also addressed the meeting.

Members of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs are preparing for its annual meeting at Norfolk May 2 and 3. The Norfolk Federation will be hostess to other clubs. Due to a change in the constitution of the federation made in October, it was decided that, inasmuch as the gardening season in Virginia is at its height in the spring, the annual meeting should be held at that time. This shortens the fiscal year.

Representatives are expected from garden clubs in Norfolk, Amelia, Blackstone, Roanoke, Farmville, Staunton, Newport News, Luray, Clifton Forge, Danville, Manassas, Waynesboro, Hopewell, Bedford and other places.

Miss Anna Katherine Roulette again will head the Potomac Playmakers, dramatic organization of the Hagerstown (Md.) Women's Club, which has completed a successful season. The Playmakers are planning a final event, a frolic at the Hagerstown Country Club Wednesday. The frolic, to be offered instead of a one-act play originally planned, will present dramatic skits, musical numbers and a dance.

Mrs. Leslie Manners, long active in the amateur theatricals here, has been elected vice president of the Playmakers. The organization has under consideration a plan for a change in policy for next season. When a cast is composed of novices the direction and staging of a play would be placed in the hands of experts.

Mrs. Willis Dern will be hostess to the Ballenger Women's Club of Frederick, Md., today. The program is under direction of Mrs. Preston Zimmerman, chairman of the publicity committee. Mrs. Edgar Hargett is in charge of recreation.

Nats Conquer Red Sox in Ninth, 5-3, on Cronin's Two Errors

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Boston, April 28.

"I HAVE learned more about my ball club in these first ten games of the season than I learned in eight weeks of spring training." Bucky Harris, manager of the Nats, declared today as he looked hopefully toward the future. The original boy manager of the Washington club was fresh from his third straight victory over the hated Boston Red Sox and his countenance glowed with satisfaction. He talked readily of the club's outlook in the pennant race.

POVICH.

"We're shaping up as well as I expected and you know nothing less than the pennant will satisfy me," he said. "It's a long haul, no matter where we finish, but this team is going to come along.

"We have our problems, you know what they are. We're still short on pitchers and we're still looking for that fourth starter. Little Leon Pettit is a God-send to us in a relief role, but I don't know if he can go nine innings. We're watching the waiver lists for another pitcher and we'll probably pick one up before long.

"There's no kick coming other than that. We've seen enough of Cliff Bolton to know he'll do behind the bat. The infield always has been set and Jake Powell can hang onto his center-field job as long as he hits the way he has in the last few games.

"WE'VE got a hitting ball club, if the pitchers will just nurse some of our leads along. This is anybody's pennant race and we'll be in it with both feet. The only thing that figures to bother us is left-handed pitching and I think I can take care of that with Ossie Bluege and Red Kress ready to step into the line-up. We'll be all right. I can do a lot with this club's batting order."

Harris failed to mention that his own managerial strategy has been no drawback to the team, but the fact remains that he has batted 1.000 in his conduct of the team. He has yanked his starting pitchers with such unfailing timeliness that his moves seemed pre-ordained and in no instance has his choice of a relief pitcher been poor.

Under Harris, the Nats are a bunting team. Harris is capitalizing on the presence of such talented bunters as Jake Powell, Lynn Lary and Heinie Manush and the manner in which they have upset the poise of enemy pitchers with tantalizing bunts this season has contributed no little to the Nats' success.

Twice in this series here, Harris has called for well-timed steals and Lynn Lary and Buddy Myer got away with them to score from second on base hits that followed.

THE Nats' present status in the league standings, third place, with seven victories and four defeats, is not particularly disturbing to Harris. He points out that the Yankees, which he rates as the most serious contender, are in the same position. Cleveland's lead is quite meaningless at this stage of the race, he declares, as is the White Sox's spectacular string of successes. Detroit's place near the cellar is gratifying to Bucky, who rates the Tigers next to the Yankees as the most serious rivals of the Nats.

As a result of Ed Linke's failure in a starting role yesterday, Harris declared he may turn Jack Russell as the team's fourth starting pitcher. With Monte Weaver and Walter Stewart far off form, Russell, with Leon Pettit, represent Harris' chief hope of finding another starting hurler. In the face of Pettit's success in relief work, Harris hesitates to change his status.

U. S. Title for Babe Didrikson Within 3 Years, Says Gallico

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Down Texas way, a couple of friends of mine played themselves a game of golf that got itself into the newspapers. One was Babe Didrikson, the track and field star, and the other Peggy Chandler, the Dallas golfer, wife and mother.

Dan Chandler, Peggy's husband, is a former West Pointer and a swell guy. Mrs. Chandler is the only gal I ever knew who could run a home and play tournament golf at the same time. She bears an astonishing facial resemblance to Helen Wills. She beat me playing golf, as did Babe Didrikson, which is no story. But Babe beat Peggy in the 36-hole final of the Texas Women's Golf Championship, at Houston, yesterday afternoon, which has much of an element of news in it.

The Texas Babe, or modest Mildred, as she is sometimes known, always said she's be a top-flight golfer some day, and I, for one, always believed her. And now she is definitely on her way. She beat Mrs. Chandler 2 up, scoring an eagle 3 on a par 5 hole to do it. She must know Gene Sarazen.

Golf experts will tell you that most State titles don't mean much but that the Texas title does. They have more good women golfers down that way than you can shake a niblic at, all of them coming champions. The Women's Golf Championship is going to Texas within the next couple of years, and perhaps it will be La Didrikson who will take it.

Mildred has the same determination and fight that Sarazen has. I wrote a few years ago that when Babe learned a little more golf and grooved her swing, steadied herself and learned how to approach and putt she would raise cain with the average competing woman by her wholly masculine aggressiveness and pugnacity. I can see this program beginning to turn into fact from the reports from Texas, from which I gather that after a pretty hot fight the two girls came to the thirty-third tee all square. It was a par 5 hole.

Marvelous Mildred must have hit a brutal second swipe for a par 5 hole, because the ball, according to the dispatch, flew 75 yards past the green, while Mrs. Chandler got nicely home in 2 and had two putts for her birdie 4. Knowing Babe as I do, I can well imagine her swaggering down to her ball saying, "Reckon as I'll have to sink this'a one."

The Babe is another of that astonishing string of modern champions who seem to be able to call their big moments. The dispatch said she chipped her ball into the cup for an eagle. Seventy-five yards sounds like a pretty big chip. Maybe they meant feet, but whatever it was the ball went into the hole and her opponent's fine birdie 4 wasn't good enough to win.

Braves TopDodgers,5-3; Ruth Strikes Out Twice

Brooklyn, April 28 (AP).—The Dodgers were unable to hit in the pinches today and were beaten, 5 to 3, by Bob Smith and the Braves to lose the series at Ebbets Field, two games to one. With three singles and a double, Shanty Hogan led the 11-hit attack against Van Mungo.

Babe Ruth fanned twice, grounded out once and walked before he left the game in the seventh inning.

28,000 Fans Boo Boston Manager

4 Runs in 9th Lead to Griff's 3d Victory Over Hub Club.

Bluege, Kress, Bolton Thwart Wes Ferrell's Fine Hurling.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

FENWAY PARK, Boston, Mass., April 28.—Under the inspiring leadership of Joe Cronin, manager of the Red Sox, the Nats staged a last ditch, ninth-inning rally today to sweep the three-game series with the Boston club.

With a pathetic performance at shortstop in that uproarious ninth inning, Cronin brought down about his ears again the rich, ripe boos of 28,000 Boston fans who saw the errant fingers of their quarter million dollar player-manager present his daddy-in-law's ball team with a 5-3 victory.

It was Cronin, with the echoes of Thursday's prolonged booing still ringing in his ears, who single handedly converted a 3-to-1 Boston victory into an inglorious defeat by two grievous errors behind the superlative pitching of Wes Ferrell, who was coasting toward a triumphant finish.

It was Cronin who inspired the long-delayed assault on Ferrell in the ninth by muffing Cliff Bolton's grounder with none out and the Nats trailing 3 to 1. And then after Jake Powell singled to place the tying run on base, it was Cronin who personally presented the ball game to the Nats.

Muffs Grounder.

Lyn Lary had moved both runners up a base with a sacrifice bunt when Bucky Harris sent Red Kress to bat for Bump Hadley, who apparently had lost his pitching duel with Ferrell. But that was reckoning without Cronin, because when Kress drove a grounder to the short field territory, Cronin made a miserable muff of the ball allowing Ossie Bluege running for Bolton, and Powell to gallop home with the tying runs.

Then it was that the full volume of boos fell upon Cronin's ears. A faithful few attempted to stem the indignation with applause, but the handclasps were lost in the crescendo of jeers. At his shortstop post, Cronin pawed the dirt with his foot, disgusted with himself and feeling poignantly the horror of his misplays.

Your heart went out to the fellow if you saw him in his misery and remembered him as the greatest shortstop of his day a few years ago. But the Nats, rescued from defeat by his errors, were now in a relentless mood.

It would have been worth Cronin's life, it seemed, if he had removed Ferrell from the box as he did Grove on Thursday under similar circumstances, but Cronin made no move in that direction. The fault was wholly his own.

Nats Start Rally.

Thus delivered from imminent defeat, the Nats started anew against Ferrell. Buddy Myer hit into a force play but Johnny Stone larruped a single to left for the Nats' sixth hit off Ferrell, hitting the ball through the spot vacated by Cronin, who had dashed to second to cover the bag on an implied steal by Myer.

Heinie Manush pressed the advantage with a sharp single to right that scored Myer from second with the winning run, and Joe Kuhel followed with the Nats' fourth hit of the inning, a single to right that scored Stone.

With Hadley out of the game, Harris assigned Jack Russell to protect the two-run lead in the ninth. The crowd's reaction had set in when Cronin came to bat, with Werber on base and two out and the cheers for the Boston manager now predominated. A home run off his bat would tie the score. But even the wind was against Cronin

Pirates Pound Dean To Whip Cards, 3-2

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 28.—Cy Blanton, Pittsburgh prize rookie, engaged Dizzy Dean in a hurling duel and came out on top as the Pirates downed the World Champion Cardinals, 3 to 2, in the finale of their three-game series here before a crowd of 12,000.

The young Pirate recruit held St. Louis to 8 scattered hits, while his teammates landed on the best offerings of the "great one" for 11 safeties. The victory was Blanton's second in a row over the world champions and marked Dizzy's second loss of the season.

Indianapolis Race Entries Reach 60

Qualifying Trials Are Set to Start May 18.

By the United Press.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 28.—Entries for the twenty-third annual 500-mile automobile race here Memorial Day reached 60 last night, promising spectacular qualifying battles for the 33 places in the starting line-up. Entries close May 1.

Qualifying trials will start May 18 and will continue through May 28. Rules require that each must average more than 100 miles an hour for 25 miles (ten laps) to be eligible.

If more than 33 cars are qualified, those making the highest speeds will participate. Each car will be limited to the use of 3 gallons of gas in the trials and 42½ gallons in the race.

Cleveland Bows After 6 in Row; Greenberg Hits Homer.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, April 28. — The Deroit Tigers blasted four Cleveland pitchers today for 12 hits, including a home run by Hank Greenberg, to end the six-game winning streak of the Cleveland Indians. The score was 5 to 3.

It was the second defeat in ten games suffered by the Indians, who won two out of three games in the current series with the Tigers. The Indians remain at the top of the league.

Sullivan Drives in Run.

Pitcher Joe Sullivan was in the box for the Tigers in his first American League start. He held Cleveland to 11 hits. Oral Hildebrand, the Indian's starting pitcher, was knocked out in the fifth inning with one out.

Greenberg hit a double in addition to his home run, and Sullivan helped to win his own game by driving in two runs.

The Indians were unable to solve Sullivan's delivery with men on bases. Thirteen died on the paths. Sullivan is a young southpaw from the Pacific Coast, who won 26 games there last year.

Combs' Clout, 3 On, Conquers A's, 7-5

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 28.—A home run by Earl Combs with the bases loaded gave the New York Yankees a 7-to-5 victory over the Athletics today. Combs put the ball over the center-field fence in the third inning.

Bob Johnson notched four hits in a row, including two round trippers, to account for four of the A's runs.

The game was featured by fast fielding, with five double killings cutting short rallies at critical moments. The A's used four pitchers in an effort to stem the Yank attack.

8 Weeks Rule For Netmen Clamped

National Association Acts to Enforce New Edict; Committee Picked.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 28.—The United States Lawn Tennis Association set into motion today machinery to enforce observance of the universal amateur eight-week player expense allowance rule.

Walter Merrill Hall, president of the U. S. L. T. A., named a supervisory committee of six, with former President Louis J. Carruthers as chairman, and the following members: Charles S. Garland, of Philadelphia; Gregory S. Mangin, of Newark, N. J., national indoor titleholder, and Jones W. Mersereau, A. F. Von Bermuth and Holcombe Ward, of New York.

The committee will administer the International Lawn Tennis Federation's regulation which requires that a tennis player "shall not receive traveling and (or) living expenses from tennis clubs while competing in tournament play for a period in excess of eight weeks" during a year.

Effective February 10.

The rule became effective in this country as of February 10.

The rule allows exceptions in cases where a player is officially selected to represent the U. S. L. T. A. in a tournament or other competition on the order of the Davis Cup matches or foreign tours such as England's Fred Perry made to Australia last winter.

Where a player receives hospitality of a private house during a tournament he shall be exempt from the rule insofar as it applies to living expenses.

RICHMOND, April 28.—After all but killing Washington and Lee's hopes for baseball supremacy, the University of Richmond's sensational team viewed with alarm the threatening gestures of Roanoke's Maroons.

The Spiders chalked up four victories in a row in another triumphant week of play, handing out a pair of whippings to Washington and Lee, and carrying their string of successes to nine in a row against a single defeat.

Statistically, Roanoke led the parade with three victories and no defeats, but the Richmonders, on the basis of their more representative schedule, apparently have the most valid claim to top ranking until the Salem clan goes out and earns itself a reputation.

Roanoke's Maroons have no State games scheduled, but Richmond will have to make two defenses of its leadership this week. The Spiders meet Hampden-Sydney at Richmond tomorrow and their traditional enemies of William and Mary at Richmond Saturday.

Virginia's Cavaliers, determined to get into the thick of the fight, will play V. P. I. at Charlottesville tomorrow and a couple of games with North Carolina Friday and Saturday. Tech and Washington and Lee will clash at Blacksburg Friday and Saturday.

Randolph-Macon has Monday and Tuesday games booked with St. John's, of Ashland; Hampden-Sydney has Tuesday and Wednesday engagements with the Medical College nine at Richmond and Bridgewater and the Medicos will clash Saturday at Bridgewater.

The standings of Virginia baseball teams against all teams and in the State championship race follow:

Association Sanctions Two D. C. Canoe Events

Philadelphia, April 28 (AP).—Two 1935 canoe events for Washington were sanctioned last night at a meeting of the Middle States Division of the American Canoe Association here. It was decided that the Middle States divisional championships probably would be held in Washington July 13 or 20, although the site was not definitely decided upon.

The events sanctioned were the Washington Canoe Club Regatta, June 15, and the President's Cup Regtaat canoe events in September. Eight other events were assigned other parts of the division.

323 Play Golf at Columbia In Tribute to Cy Cummings

THEY paid tribute to a grand man, one of the pioneer golfers of Washington, yesterday at Columbia Country Club.

It was "Cy Cummings Day," held in honor of Andrew J. (Cy) Cummings, member at the club for 25 years.

The popularity of Cummings, who is president of the Laurel race track, was clearly shown when a record-smashing total of 323 club members played the course and stayed for the ceremonies. Golf Chairman Marty West, who, with his committee, put on one of the finest shows in Columbia history, said the 323 eclipsed by 13 the number of golfers who set a one-day attendance record on July 4 a few years ago.

Bob Gardner, with a 73, had the day's lowest score.

Cummings was presented with eight silver goblets by Robert H. Dalgleish, Columbia president. J. Thilman Hendrick, former District Commissioner, principal speaker on the program, paid tribute to Cummings. Introduced by Chairman West, Cummings responded in a brief speech.

Until illness overtook him a few years ago, Cy Cummings was one of Columbia's most active golfers. Still an ardent golf fan, he is at the club almost daily, and treks out to the eighteenth green to watch the finishes of some of those stirring matches between club members.

Unbeaten Generals Lead in Dixie Race

Duke, With 3 Victories in Week, Is Second.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 28.—Washington and Lee's Generals rode alone at the head of the Southern Conference Baseball parade, boasting the only perfect score in the league.

Meanwhile, Duke's Blue Devils, one of the finest combinations in the loop, chalked up three league victories during the week to move into second place as North Carolina's Tarheels, undefeated in their single previous game, fell before North Carolina State, 3 to 1, yesterday.

Schumacher Grants Phils But 1 Hit

Rival Hurler's Scratch Single Spoils Effort; Giants Win, 3-0.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 28.—One single of a very scratchy variety spoiled Hal Schumacher's chance for a perfect game today as the big right-hander hurled the Giants to a 3-to-0 victory over the Phillies to strengthen the club's hold on the National League lead.

Orville Jorgens, second of three Philly moundsmen, got the lone blow in the third inning. Schumacher got his glove in front of the hard-hit ball and deflected it to Dick Bartell, who went across to the far side of second to take it. His hurried throw went over Terry's head and Jorgens continued to second. The scorer gave Jordens a hit and Bartell an error.

Only 29 players faced Schumacher and only two reached first. After Jorgens got his hit the Phils were retired in order until Lou Chiozza drew a walk in the ninth. Not one Philadelphia blow went past the infield until the eighth frame when Mickey Haslin hoisted a fly to Mel Ott.

Cubs' 3 Runs in Ninth Score Over Reds, 4-1

Cincinnati, April 28 (AP).—Behind the five-hit pitching of Bill Lee, the Chicago Cubs scored three runs in the ninth today to win from Cincinnati, 4 to 1.

The season's largest crowd—29,514 paid customers—or 2,000 more than saw the local opener, watched Sammy Byrd make the Reds' lone score—a homer in the first, his third of the year.

Bokar and Encore Are Victors as A & P League Opens Season

Bonday Ties With Rajah At 9 to 9

Zink Tosses First Ball; Crowd of 1,500 Sees Three Battles.

STARTING with General Superintendent F. W. Zink's toss, which signalized the opening of the 1935 campaign for Post Association honors in the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. league, the Ellipse diamonds yesterday resounded with the rattle of base hits and the cheers of the 1,500 spectators.

With Holt, Smith and Smith hitting the ball to all corners of the lot, Bokar defeated Iona, 11 to 7; Encore withstood a belated scoring offensive to nose out Condor, 8 to 7, and Bonday crashed through with a six-run scoring spree in the seventh and final innings to gain a 9-all tie with the Rajah boys.

All three games were called at the end of the seventh inning because of the expiration of the two-hour time limit for the diamonds.

Both Pitchers Moyer and Springman were hampered considerably by their teammates' loose play in the Encore-Condor contest. Several misplays sandwiched in between some timely hitting by Sherber and Wallace proved the downfall of Mayer in the fifth inning.

Infielders Thayer and Skinner came through with bingles just in the nick of time to rescue Bonday from apparent defeat. Manager Konouch of the Rajahs and Hall of Iona clouted home runs.

Two Sandlot Loops Open Today

Departmental and Federal Leagues Are Ready to Start Season.

SECRETARY of the Interior Harold Ickes and Judge Hugh M. Tate, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, have been named as the starting pitchers in today's opening games in the Department and Federal leagues, two of the outstanding week-day loops affiliated with The Washington Post Sandlot Baseball Association.

Secretary Ickes will toss out the first ball to send the Government Printing Office and Public Works Administration teams into the initial scrap of the Departmental League on the North Ellipse at 5 o'clock.

Its ace hurlers, Frank Corkins and Bob Lyons, in good shape, Manager George Mosedale's G. P. O. team is confident of repeating its title-winning feat of last season. Strengthened by the acquisition of several new players, P. W. A. boasts a more formidable offensive to back up the pitching of its veteran star pitcher, Louis "Lefty" Jewett.

Lisensky at Third.

Ed Lisensky will be at third base for G. P. O. in the place of Ray Homan, who has transferred to the Union Printers Nine.

G. P. O. Federals, 1934 champs, and the Interstate Commerce Commission, will be rivals in the inaugural attraction of the Federal loop on the No. 4 monument lot at 5 o'clock.

Beginning tomorrow the Federal League games will be shifted to the adjacent No. 3 diamond. The schedule:

Tomorrow, Procurement Division vs. Federal Communications; Wednesday, Interstate Commerce Commission vs. G. P. O. Paramounts; Thursday, Federal Communications vs. G. P. O. Federals; Friday, G. P. O. Paramounts vs. Procurement Division.

Front Royal Nips Majestics, 2 to 1

Lacy McFall's Hit in 7th Gives Winning Margin.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., April 28.—Behind the three-hit pitching of Larry Boerner, the Front Royal All-Stars took the season opener from Majestice Radio, of Washington, here this afternoon, 2 to 1.

Whalen, second sacker, robbed Boerner of a shut-out with a second-inning home run. Wild Bill Payne also pitched well, holding the Stars to eight hits. Vondek scored the winning tally in the seventh on a walk, two fielder's choices and Lacy McFall's hit. Fitzgerald, with a triple and double, led both teams at bat.

The All-Stars despite game to be played on foreign fields on May 4 and May 25. Teams interested write the All-Stars' manager.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 28.—Public workouts will be held at the nearby Labrot Farm tomorrow and Friday of the 36 horses which will be sold at auction at Belmont Park on May 17. These horses will be sold to settle the estate of S. W. Labort, late Maryland sportsman, whose family will not be represented on the turf in the future. Following Friday's workouts, the group will be shipped to New York.

New Entrants In 3 Leagues Impress

Army Medico, Cherner and Ballston Are Among Sandlot Victors.

SEVERAL of the new teams now competing for Post Association titles in the National City, Northern Virginia and Department Store Leagues served notice of their championship calibre by their impressive performances yesterday.

Baseball enthusiasm among the sandlot teams has attained new heights this year, and the pennant races in all 17 associated leagues of The Washington Post Sandlot Baseball Association promise to be bitterly contested. Each of the league champions will be awarded gold baseballs by The Post Association, while silver trophies will be given the winner of the inter-league champions tournament at the end of the season.

Displaying a well balanced defense behind the effective hurling of Pitcher Fetterolf, the Army Medico team stamped itself as an outstanding threat in the National City League by its impressive 10-4 victory over Fort Stevens.

Cherner Nine Triumphs.

Cherner Motor Co. also must be reckoned in the pennant race of this loop, following its 5-0 triumph over Arlington A. C. nine yesterday on the Arlington field. Heinie Newman, Cherner's best bet, looked as good as ever yesterday in his three-hit pitching performance.

The 8-to-6 decision over Mount Vernon in a ten-inning battle boosted the stock of the Georgetown A. C. not a little and gave it renewed confidence in its fight in the National City League. This is the first year for Georgetown A. C. in the ranks of organized baseball.

Despite its 5-to-6 defeat by Elm Camp, the Hecht Co. displayed enough pitching and batting strength to stand out as a real threat in the department store loop.

Ballston Wins, 6 to 0.

If the veteran Calvin Hull continues to pitch as he did yesterday, there is little doubt of the pennant potentialities of the Ballston club in the Northern Virginia League. Aided no little by Howard King's slugging, Ballston beat the Treasury Department nine of the Government League, by a 6-to-0 score.

Falls Church and Fairfax Station, also contenders in the Northern Virginia loop, appear to be fit and ready for the season's campaign. These rivals staged a thrilling 3-2 battle, which Clarence Fox won for Falls Church with a three-base smash in the eighth inning.

The National City, Northern Virginia and Department Store Leagues will open their official 1935 league seasons Sunday.

Virginia Plays 17 Contests This Week

Special Dispatch to The Post.

UNIVERSITY, Va., April 28.—Virginia has a full sport schedule of 17 contests for this week. Including varsity and freshman meetings, there are seven baseball games, five tennis matches, three track meets and two golf matches.

The baseball and track men both compete at home tomorrow. The nine plays Virginia Polytechnic Institute while the track and field boys oppose Maryland.

Virginia's tennis players, headed by Carl Rohman, Southern Conference singles champion, continue their trip by playing Yale at New Haven tomorrow, then Pennsylvania in Philadelphia on Wednesday and Maryland in College Park on Thursday.

To Meet W. and L. Nine.

The baseball team goes to Lexington on Tuesday for a second attempt to play the game with Washington and Lee that was rained out earlier in April and Saturday finds the Cavaliers competing against North Carolina in their own territory.

This week there are two varsity track meets, for in addition to the engagement with Maryland here tomorrow Virginia meets Navy in Annapolis on Saturday. The undefeated first year track team has a Thursday meeting with McGuire's School of Richmond, at home.

Annapolis Trims FHA Team, 2 to 1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 28.—Gov. Harry W. Nice tossed the first ball and other ceremonials marked the formal opening of the semiprofessional baseball season today as the Annapolis Baseball Club turned in a 2-to-1 victory over the Federal Housing Administration nine of Washington.

The game was a pitchers' duel, with Bobby Wortych of the locals holding a slight edge over Turlbutt, and getting better support from his mates.

The game went six innings without a score, each team tallying in the seventh. The winning run came in the ninth on singles by C. Townsend and Myers, and an error by Brockwell, at second.

Chesapeake Beats Heurich Nine, 3-1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

West Point, Va., April 28.—Chesapeake broke even in its two-game series with the Heurich Brewers of Washington by winning today, 3 to 1.

June Greene and Lefty Brown again showed the 1,350 fans a pitchers' battle, Greene allowing seven scattered hits while Brown gave up ten. Greene struck out six and was never in trouble. Brown was given rather shabby support, his team mates making four errors.

Hitting honors went to Monk Robbins, who made three hits out of four trips to the plate.

Celtics Swamp Blue Flames Nine, 26-4

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., April 28.—The St. Mary's Celtics went on a batting spree this afternoon at Baggett's Stadium, routing the Blue Flame Valets, of Washington, 26 to 4.

Russ Kidwell's nine pounded out 29 hits, one home run, including three triples and two doubles off the offerings of Hawkins and Baker.

Shoute Taylor and Art Larey performed well on the mound for the Celtics allowing nine safeties between them.

East Potomac Golf Tourney To Open

Field of 75 Expected for Spring Event; Will Qualify Today.

CLAUDE RIPPY, standout municipal golfer of last season, is the odds-on favorite to win the East Potomac spring championship which opens with an 18-hole medal round this morning.

A field of 75 players is expected to toe the mark. Sixty-two entered up to last night. Defeated by Volney Burnett, in the Rock Creek semifinals last week, Rippy will tee off at 9:25 in company with Bob Gabriel and A. M. Strom.

John Downey, a former winner, who has played comparatively little golf this season due to illness, returns to his competitive wars, and, along with Herman Allen, Rock Creek finalist, and Harold Bowers promises to give Rippy a close battle for the title.

If Andy (Chubby) Oliveri, Roosevelt High star, can get away from school early enough, he will attemp to qualify for the top flight.

Post entries will be accepted.

Courses B and G, each with a par of 35, will be used.

Two rounds of match play are scheduled tomorrow and two Wednesday.

Pairings and starting times follow:

8—B. Talbott, Vernon Dodge, Pat Axtell, Harmon Talbott, 9:00. 8—W. Reynolds, Bill Fahey, Ralph Dodge, 9:10. 8—A. Holmes, Bill Selman, 9:15. 8

Nellie Flag and Today Seen Co-Favorites in Derby Saturday

Stock Raised Following Victories

Omaha's Odds Lowered; Weston Impressive in Workout.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 28.—The brilliant performances of the Amazonian filly Nellie Flag and the sturdy colt Today in yesterday's turf wars on Western and Eastern fronts made it appear likely today they will share the favoritism of the crowd of 100,000 expected to witness the sixty-first Kentucky Derby here next Saturday.

The Calumet Farm miss served notice she may duplicate Regret's feat of 1915 by showing her heels to the colts which matched strides with her in the mud in a Derby test at Churchill Downs. Like Regret, only filly to win the Derby, Nellie Flag, whose grand-daddy is the famous Man o' War, is built more along masculine than feminine lines. She now is quoted at 8 to 1.

Outran Six Eligibles.

Nellie Flag outran six Derby eligibles in the Cherokee Park Purse, including J. E. Widener's Chance Sun, which for two months ruled as the winter book favorite, but forfeited the role by poor workouts. C. V. Whitney's Today shortened his odds to 3 to 1 by his brilliant victory in the Wood Memorial at Jamaica over a fast track.

The stamina shown by William Woodward's colt, Omaha, in coming from behind to finish third in the same race caused bookmakers, mindful of the Derby distance at a mile and a quarter, to shorten his odds to 4 to 1.

Weston, the colt owned by Jouett Shouse, also stood out as a derby contender as a result of his sensational workout at the Downs. His handlers have selected the Derby Trial on Tuesday's program for his first competitive test of the season and his final Derby prep.

Others May Bid.

Mrs. W. M. Jeffords' Commonwealth or possibly Col. E. R. Bradley's Boxthorn, depending on preps this week, may bid for the role of favorite.

The track at the Downs was too muddy today to permit any real test of derby eligibles in workouts. The Milky Way Farm's Gallaclay ran five-eighths of a mile in 1:01; driving, the best workout of the day. Whiskola, of the same stable, did five-eights in 1:02 3-5 handily.

Other workouts were: Roman Soldier, three-eighths in 0:39 3-5; Chanceview, three-fourths in 1:18 2-5; St. Bernard, half 0:53 2-5, three-fourths, 1:20 3-5 and mile, 1:48 3-5; Sun Fairplay, half 52, three-fourths 1:18 2-5 and mile 1:45.

'Jury' of Trainers Likes Commonwealth

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—A jury of 12 trainers, 11 men and 1 woman, failed to reach an agreement today when called upon to decide in advance the horse that will win the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs Saturday.

The trainers cast three ballots for Walter M. Jeffords' Commonwealth, two each for William Woodward's Omaha, Elwood Sachsemaier's Roman Soldier and Warren Wright's Nellie Flag and one each for Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Psychic Bid, C. V. Whitney's Today and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Plat Eye.

Favors Roman Soldier.

Mary Hirsch, lone woman on the jury and the only woman licensed to train horses in New York State, came in strong for Roman Soldier. She was given the support of Bill Knapp who was astride Exterminator when "Old Bones" won the 1919 running of the derby. But there the support for the Texas Derby winner stopped.

Despite his mediocre showing in the Chesapeake Stakes at Havre de Grace, Commonwealth, the big gelding which won the endurance handicap at Bowie as a 2-year-old, received the votes of his trainer, Preston Burch, J. P. (Sammy) Smith and Matt Brady.

Earl Sande, one of the two jockeys who have won three Kentucky Derbies, lost no time putting in a word for Omaha. It was aboard Omaha's Daddy, Gallant Fox, that Sande won his third derby.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al, Pimlico Race Track, April 28.

Sonny Workman lost the $500 gold watch offered by Havre de Grace for the jockey riding the most winners. Jimmy Lynch, the apprentice rider, took it by the margin of riding the last winner of the day, Hereward. It was an uneven finish for Workman who had to be at Jamaica yesterday afternoon to ride C. V. Whitney's Today. The writer suggested to Sonny last Friday night that he grab a plane and fly down to Havre de Grace for the seventh race in case Lynch had not ridden a winner by that time. And Sonny thought it over before turning down the suggestion. You know Lynch had a mount, Flat Rock, in the sixth and there was no assurance that he wouldn't ride to victory on that one. Then, again, Sonny figured that the Wood Memorial would be late in going to the post and he figured the last at the Graw would go off about 5:45. As it turned out, Workman was weighing out at Jamaica about 4:03 and the seventh in Maryland was off at 6:05. I tried to scoop the world on the story and you can't blame me for trying. Incidentally, Workman flew down to Washington this morning, I understand. Louis Orienzio, of the University of Maryland, wants to know the name of the horse that won at Charles Town without a win bet on him. Sweep Vestal was the horse. Tiny Miss was second and Quick Wit third. The date was December 18. BILL.

First race—Piccolo, a Whitneyite, drops down after a pair of tries in swifter company and seems educated enough to take this heat with Workman in the saddle. Sandy Mack's last was a good one and second appears right. Per Diem will draw much play and is a speedy youngster.

Second race—Senado has been schooling well and appears to have as much chance as anything over the jumps. White Lightning and Sid for the other awards. This is a good race to watch.

Third race—Justa Jones has been groomed right here on the grounds and is said to be a brisk worker, ready to pop down at the first asking. An off track would help. Accolade has been doing good and appears to be the one to beat. Cancel for the show award.

Fourth race—Sun Spear packs 120 pounds for this, but should improve over that last, his first outing of the season. Brains was a shifty one at Havre de Grace and will be there or thereabouts at the finish of this test. Last Romance for the rest.

Fifth race—Bally Ray failed us at the other track, but that was not his race. I expect better things tomorrow with the change of scenery. Waterset should go well, particularly if the track turns muddy. Believer needed that last and is a possible surprise.

Sixth race—Dreel won very impressively at Bowie and has been showing a lot of speed in trials. He may be overlooked in this field and come through at good odds, if Identify and Dogmata are scratched out of the Vanderbilt entry. Dogmata would be a threat on a soggy track. Star Porter deserves another chance to be close. Only One was speedy Saturday and must be reckoned with if sent back.

Seventh race—Postage Due and Winter Sport, another Vanderbilt entry, seem to have a lock and key on this race. They will have James City and Zuni as their chief rivals.

Eighth race—Unless Marmion has broke a leg recently, this one should take the final. Has a class edge on everything in the race and looks good despite heavy weight. Gifted Lady and Bright Bird to take care of the others.

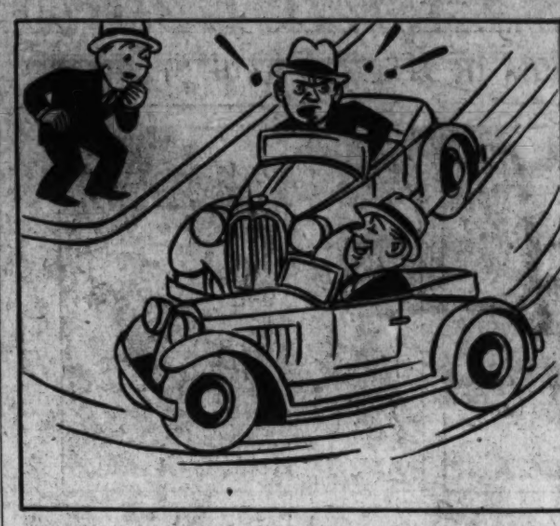
Turning From Wrong Lane Is a Serious Traffic Hazard



Last night's Postlion broadcast included an explanation of another Washington traffic hazard. This program was presented over Station WMAL of the National Broadcasting Co. by Harris Hull, of The Post staff. Mr. Hull's remarks concerning traffic are reprinted for the benefit of those who may not have heard this program—Editor's note.

Making a turn from the wrong lane, as the above driver is doing, constitutes a serious Washington traffic hazard.

The regulations in this regard are simple. When making a right-hand turn approach the intersection in the lane of traffic nearest to the right-hand side of the street. The turn should be made as close as is practical to the right-hand curb.

In the case of a left-hand turn the approach to the intersection should be made in the lane for traffic to the right of and nearest to the center line of the street.

Although there is nothing very difficult about these rules, we see a great many District drivers swing around the corner in much the same manner employed by our somewhat unconscious friend above.

In making the turn keep slightly to the left of the center point of the intersection. This will prevent your crossing paths with a driver whose car is approaching you, and who also is making a left turn. Thus traffic will not be delayed and there is less chance of an accident.

But simply turning from the wrong lane is not the only cardinal sin of driving that the above motorist is committing. Can you find his second mistake?

He has forgotten to give any warning by hand signal that he is planning to change his course. When making a turn, remember, give a timely signal, thereby cautioning drivers coming up behind you. This is done by simply extending your hand out of the car.

Occasionally when traffic is heavy a driver will find that he can not get into the proper lane for his right or left turn. This is especially true in Washington, where there are so many angular intersections and circles.

In such a case, relax a little. Take it easy. Drive on to the next intersection and make the turn there, being sure that you are in the correct lane. The time consumed is only a matter of seconds. This may represent a considerable saving over the usual day required to have your fenders straightened, not to speak of the unnecessary cost.

In making all turns drivers should remember, above everything, that when they cut through the cross walks being used by the pedestrians, the pedestrians, and not the drivers, have the right of way. The driver must remember that he may be approaching a pedestrian from the rear. All turns should be made at reduced rates of speed with the car under absolute control as it cuts through pedestrians' crosswalks. In other words, take it easy when you turn. Don't see how loud you can make your tires scream. That is hard on the tires, hard on the pedestrians' hearts, and it may be hard on you.

On earlier programs in this series we cautioned you as a pedestrian to cross the streets at intersections walking only on the green lights, walking only on the green lights. We explained to you that you will materially reduce your chances of being injured if you will observe this regulation.

And we reminded you as drivers that the pedestrian who has left the curb on the green light is entitled to finish his journey across the street, even though the light changes to red while he is on his way.

If you will carefully observe these simple rules you will be doing your share to reduce Washington's very heavy automobile death toll. In addition you will be protecting yourself as well as helping others.

Will you do your part?

And I do mean YOU.

PROPOSALS

For money we use pids. Then everybody raise too many...can you tell answer to..?
Oh yes. But I'll need time, Sultan. A half hour or so.
BUT NIGHTS LATER THE PROBLEM OF A TOO HIGH BIRTH-RATE IN MONEY WAS UNSOLVED.
Yes Sultan, I am thinking about those pids, but I also have a bad tooth that...
What! You walk floor and keep awake me, a Sultan, with cheap tooth..? wait, this give me idea!
Hoop-rah! Trouble are all over! We use tooth for money! Nobody can raise tooth so fast as pids. This bid idea are very clear, eh?
Clear? Well, yes, ah.. but let's do over it again. Very slowly, Sultan.

Dirksen Firm For D. C. Taboo On HiddenBars

Pressure From Interests Won't Have Influence on Reform Sponsor.

Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, has no intention of yielding to pressure to drop his bill to abolish hidden bars in Washington, he said Saturday.

The sub-committee which reported his bill favorably to the House District Committee will meet tomorrow morning to reconsider the Dirksen bill together with the dozen amendments to the District liquor act asked by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

The hidden-bar measure was not brought up in the House last District day chiefly because one of the sections had been garbled in rewriting. Another pungent reason, however, was that pressure was being exerted by Washington interests.

A section that is under fire perhaps more than the hidden bar ban would require drug stores and delicatessen stores to observe the same closing hours as other off-sale licensees.

Dirksen may yield on this section and agree to its withdrawal on agreement that the permissive prohibition against hidden bars be retained.

There is a strong possibility that the Dirksen bill will be combined with the ABC amendments in an omnibus measure to alter the District liquor control law.

The permissive feature of the ban on hidden bars probably will be retained because of the protests from first-class restaurants that their patrons had no desire to bring the bar into the open.

The ABC amendments are aimed at tightening the control of liquor sales in Washington. One of the proposals is that one-sale licensees be prohibited from selling drinks just before the closing hour for consumption later. This provision is aimed especially at night clubs.

Another amendment permits the ABC board to suspend as well as revoke licenses in minor offenses.

D. C. Alumni Plan Notre Dame Night

Dinner at Racquet Club to Be Held Tonight.

With a radio broadcast from New York, and speeches by prominent alumni as principal features, Universal Notre Dame night will be observed here tonight by the Notre Dame Club of Washington at a dinner in the Racquet Club.

During the broadcast, which will be heard before the dinner, speeches will be given by Frank C. Walker, director of the Division of Applications in President Roosevelt's new relief program, and a past president of the Notre Dame Alumni Association, and by Elmer Layden, Notre Dame fotball coach.

The local organization will entertain as honor guests Senators Frederick Var Nuys and Sherman Minton, of Indiana, and Representative Samuel B. Pettengill, of the Third Indiana District.

Clarence E. Manion, State director of the National Emergency Council and professor of law at the University of Notre Dame, will be the principal speaker. J. D. Hayes, president of the Washington club, will preside.

Similar alumni gatherings will be conducted by Notre Dame clubs throughout the world.

Vocational Group To Meet Thursday

E. J. Murphy, President, to Report Program.

The District of Columbia Vocational Association, organized a month ago, will hold its second meeting Thursday night at Abbott Vocational School.

E. J. Murphy, president of the group, will report plans for pushing a program of vocational activities in Washington. The club was formed to take leadership in promotion of vocational education and practical arts in the District.

It plans regular meetings to discuss problems of vocational education and the vocational student.

Women Voters to Hear 2 Senators on 'Spoils'

"Can the Parties Live Without Patronage?" will be the subject of speeches to be made by Senators Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, at a public dinner on May 8 given by the General Council of the National League of Women Voters, meeting in this city May 7-10.

League members from 38 States, led by Miss Margaret M. Wells, of Minneapolis, president, are gathering here to discuss the need for establishing trained non-political permanent personnel in public service and the elimination of the spoils system. Others to be heard are Prof. Harold Lasswell, Chicago University, and Louis Brownlow, director of the Public Administration Clearing House.

Neighborhood House To Hold May Festival

The thirty-third annual May festival of Neighborhood House will be held from Thursday to Saturday at the settlement, 470 N street southwest. Daily programs will be held at 4:30 p. m. and 10 p. m.

The climax of the three-day celebration will be a processional and maypole dance on the street near the settlement. The crowning of the May queen will take place at the processional.

● Marriages are made in heaven . . . but homes are made at The Hecht Co. A fluttering bride-to-be thinks of us when she has home-making on her mind. Browsing in our thirty-five model rooms, she finds ideas and inspiration.

● If modern design pleases her fancy, she sees the modern furniture as the great artists have conceived it. Simple. Refined. Liveable. Visualized in charming room arrangements.

● She sees, too, many settings with period furniture. Louis XV. Louis XVI. ,Hepplewhite. Duncan Phyfe. Chippendale. Colonial. Classic motifs as lasting as mother love. Handsome originations that will grow old gracefully. And always that hallmark of quality . . . good taste.

● This is home-quarters. Maple bookstands and studio divans. Maytag washing machines and famous electric refrigerators. Venetian blinds and vivid slip covers. Porch rockers and colorful gliders. Smartly designed lamps and summer rugs. Priscilla curtains and Cannon towels. Lawn mowers and O'Cedar mops. Everything for the happy home . . . except quintuplets.
